REEL STARS GET REAL

At the Toronto International Film Festival, the A-listers stop by our studio to pose for intimate portraits and talk about new roles. If you listen closely, you can hear the Oscar buzz from here.

Photographed by Jens Langkjaer.

A close-up, high-contrast portrait of a woman's face. She is wearing dark, round-frame glasses. The brand name 'GUCCI' is embossed on the left temple of the glasses. Her eyes are light-colored, and her lips are slightly parted, showing her teeth. The lighting is dramatic, with strong highlights and shadows. The background is dark and out of focus.

Time for Change

There's no shortage of immaculately clad women in Hollywood, but with the constant stream of snaps flooding our browsers and Instagram feeds, it has become more challenging than ever to leave a mark. That's why we're so excited to unveil our newly minted annual list, "Hollywood's 50 Best Dressed" (p. 260), which honors the celebrities and artists whose styles define the red carpet, as well as the behind-the-scenes influencers who make it all possible. Mark your calendar for October 26, when we present the inaugural InStyle Awards in L.A., and go to instyle.com/instyleawards to create your own sartorially savvy lineup. When you're done, check out some of the 70 cutting-edge apps, gadgets, and sites we rounded up for "Your Search Ends Here" (p. 219). And if you're seeking a holiday gift that gives back, we've got you covered too. With each purchase of this limited-edition Michael Kors watch, the World Food Programme will donate 100 nutritious meals to children in need. Go ahead, the clock is ticking...

Cover Shoot Confidential

When we first shot Drew Barrymore in 1999, she was ready for a change. “I’ve been working for 23 years, my whole life. What now?” she said. Sixteen years and eight InStyle covers later (she holds the record!), the actress has mastered the art of constant evolution. Between takes on our N.Y.C. set, she approved bindings for her new book of personal stories (below), coordinated deliveries of her Flower Beauty line, and curated a playlist. #workgoals

After chatting at Spago in L.A., Barrymore signed Editor Ariel Foxman’s preview “galley” of Wildflower. The inscription reads: “Ariel, I’m so glad you were the first! You made me feel beyond words! I love you and thank you. Your girl, D.”

You Asked, Drew Answered

Q What would you tell your younger self?

—TESS KORNFELD, Kingston, Pa.

A To do everything the same. When you’re young, you don’t know that everything is going to be OK. But relax, it will be.

Plexiglass cuff, Stella McCartney, $185; at Saks Fifth Avenue.

Between FRIENDS

After trying on this cool cuff by Stella McCartney (pictured here with Barrymore), our cover girl texted praise and a pic of herself wearing it to the designer. An enthusiastic supporter of McCartney’s label since it launched in 2001, the star gravitated to the modern bohemian looks from the line’s resort collection.

Wool felt, suede, and calf-skin sandals, Paul Andrew, $845; at Fivestory, 212-288-1338.

HAPPY FEET

When Barrymore found out she’d been gifted these platforms, she gave our fashion assistant, Steffi Lee, a huge hug.

TALENT SHOW

L.A. artist Mimi Jung added rich texture to our set with three of her intricate weavings, including Nightfall (above). Handmade with custom-dyed mohair threads, her work is “a way of painting with natural fibers,” she says.

BEAUTY BREAKDOWN

Elle Fanning's CHIPPED TIPS

P. 250 Manicurist Debbie Leavitt created a playful, lived-in manicure that perfectly suited the 17-year-old Trumbo actress ["The Power of 3"]. "We wanted it to feel like something Elle would have done on her own," says Leavitt. In fact, Fanning was definitely a fan of the results, asking her publicist to snap a picture of them. "I'm totally obsessed," she said. Here's how the pro nailed the look.

1 Leavitt painted this vivid violet shade on each finger but stopped before the edge of the nail to give it a chipped appearance. 2 Subtle dabs of silver shimmer added dimension. 3 While the nail was still wet, she placed a few floral sparklers at random with a dot of nail glue. 4 A clear topcoat sealed the design.

WAKE UP and Smell the Coffee

PREDILECTIONS

P. 59 Festivals can be a grind for stars, so this year at the Toronto International Film Festival we asked the skilled barista Denis Grishchenko to pull shots at our tricked-out photo studio. Check the portraits in our portfolio, "Reel Stars Get Real," and get the scoop here on what made the talent stay fresh-eyed and lucid.

STATS

POPPIN' Baubles

P. 246 Naomi Campbell has a 10,000-carat smile, but on the L.A. set of our feature "Shine Bright," she had some competition: the diamonds she wore. Here are the details on the bling our fashion team handpicked for her.

4 Perfect PAIRS

You're not the only one looking for a snuggle buddy to get cozy with this holiday season. Stars, influencers, fashion houses, and retailers we've long admired are all about the love too. Thankfully, a handful have found one another and teamed up to create collaborations worth lusting after. Here are the duos that will get you feeling all the feels.

THE HIGH-LOW HOTTIES Balmain + H&M

HOW THEY MET Balmain creative director Olivier Rousteing used to wait in line for hours to score H&M's designer capsules as a teen. Now it's his turn to draw crowds when his collab drops on November 5.

THEIR LOVE CHILD The French label's greatest hits—beaded jackets, jewel-toned sequined dresses, black-and-gold tops, and cage heels—re-created with the retailer's lower-price magic. "We may be from different worlds, but we have so much in common," says H&M's creative adviser, Ann-Sofie Johansson. "We both believe fashion should be inclusive of everyone."

Beaded silk-blend top ($499), cotton dress ($299), and cotton and leather shoes with metal detailing ($199), Balmain x H&M; available November 5 at hm.com.

what's NOW! FAB COLLABS

THE SEXY-TIME TWINS

Steven Klein + Nars Cosmetics

HOW THEY MET Famed makeup artist François Nars had been a fan of the boundary-pushing photographer's work for two decades, but it took until this year for the Frenchman to screw up the courage to ask Klein to dance. "It wasn't love at first sight, because I'd adored him for a while," Nars admits.

THEIR LOVE CHILD A capsule that conjures the provocative allure of Klein's images, many of which are featured on the compacts, with Nars's saturated and shimmering colors for lips, cheeks, eyes, and nails.

THE BIG SOFTIES

Lenny Kravitz + CB2

HOW THEY MET When Kravitz isn't jamming, he stays busy with his interiors firm, Kravitz Design, through which he met CB2 managing director Ryan Turf.

THEIR LOVE CHILD Twenty pieces inspired by the rocker's earthy-glam style, like sheepskin tables and gold-accented lamps. "Lenny and his team have a great attention to detail and passion for affordable design," says Turf.

Cotton and cotton velvet pillow ($40) and aluminum lamp base with linen shade ($349), CB2 x Kravitz Design by Lenny Kravitz; cb2.com.

THE RULE BREAKERS

Rebel Wilson + Torrid

HOW THEY MET The Pitch Perfect star fell for the plus-size retailer when she tried on a pair of its jeans at a photo shoot, so last year, her talent agency set up a meeting for her with Torrid's CEO, Lisa Harper.

THEIR LOVE CHILD A 25-item line infused with Wilson's sassy humor, like T-shirts with her name splashed across them. "I want people to be rebels in their own lives," she says. "No one thought I would be an actress crushing it around the world, but I beat the odds. I want to encourage women out there to go out and crush it too."

Polyester-spandex dress ($69), jersey T-shirt ($35), and rayon-nylon double-knit sweater ($55), Rebel for Torrid; available November 1 at torrid.com.

HOW TO TAKE HAPPINESS SERIOUSLY

Julia Roberts

may be known for her Mona Lisa smile, but not many people realize how damn hard she works for it. The Lancôme spokeswoman and star of Secrets in Their Eyes, out November 20, reveals how she cultivates the joy from within.

Choose wisely.

One of the first steps to happiness is deciding that you want to be happy and knowing what that means. I have had many full-on conversations about what that looks like for me. To be happy is a choice you make every day, every hour. And refining and renewing that state is a constant pursuit.

Take a moment.

I'm devoted to yoga, but the empowerment comes not from doing the asanas but from being able to step out of a busy day and take time for myself. That could be running or reading a book or whatever. To feel yourself get lighter, you must let go of what weighs you down emotionally.

Turn off.

We live in an age in which technology is both liberating and enslaving. It's hard for any parent, especially a working parent, to sign off. When I'm at home with my children and husband [cinematographer Daniel Moder], it's a continual exercise to allow myself to unplug.

Be strong and fair.

I make an effort to teach my kids to respond with empathy when someone is unkind. If they feel hurt by someone, my husband and I try to help them see beyond the pain, into what might be happening with the person who caused it. It's hard, even as an adult, to see beyond your own experience, but it allows you to treat others fairly.

Find a power anthem and run with it.

My kids listen to Survivor's "Eye of the Tiger," but I am obsessed with "Geronimo," by Sheppard. I first heard it at my son's soccer game. Whenever it's on while I'm running, I feel like I can complete whatever mile I'm on.

Trust yourself.

It's been more difficult for women than men to be no-nonsense. But in tough decisions, I've always relied on my gut. I think it's really important for women to be in touch with their instincts and have enough faith in themselves to follow them.

—KAHLANA BARFIELD

Peanuts-à-Porter

As Charlie Brown, Snoopy, and the gang hit the big screen in The Peanuts Movie, out November 6, fashion director Melissa Rubini styles the leading ladies for the big première in red-carpet-ready fall looks.

PATRICIA “PEPPER- MINT PATTY” REICHARDT

“Ever the tomboy, Miss PP would feel most comfortable in pants, which is why Prada’s two-piece suits her perfectly,” says Rubini. In true Patty fashion, she kept on her signature Birkenstocks but upgraded them in metallic gold.

GIAMBATTISTA
VALLI COUTURE

SALLY BROWN

“Sally is the type of girl who would jump up and show off her outfit,” says Peanuts director Steve Martino. So Rubini picked out an ensemble worth flaunting: this confection by Giambattista Valli. “A stunning dress can make anyone giddy, even a cartoon character,” says Rubini.

COUTURE

LUCY VAN PELT

This psychiatric-booth operator required a strong look to match her #girlboss personality. Rubini turned to the avant-garde Maison Margiela, now designed by John Galliano. “Not only does Lucy show her forward thinking with this number,” says Rubini, “but she can also keep her 5¢ fees in those pockets.”

To Africa with Love

As a Goodwill Ambassador for the United Nations Development Programme, ABC's Nashville star Connie Britton spends her free time fighting to empower women worldwide

Friday Night Lights fans may recall that Connie Britton's character, Tami Taylor, would often head to bed wearing an African Children's Choir T-shirt. But few know that her T reflected a true passion of Britton's herself. The star has been volunteering with the choir and a host of other organizations in the region since the late '90s. "There's something very appealing about that part of the world," she says. "Though we often see the negative, it's a beautiful place with a rich cultural history." Since April 2014, the actress has served alongside Antonio Banderas, Maria Sharapova, and eight others as a Goodwill Ambassador for the United Nations Development Programme (UNDP), the U.N.'s anti-poverty agency. "This is something I've dreamed about for a long time in terms of what I want to be doing with my career and my life," she says. "It's one of my greatest opportunities yet." You've been working in countries like Kenya and Rwanda for nearly two decades. What are some of the issues you are most eager to address now? Education, particularly for girls. Many are still not getting proper schooling for various reasons—some of them cultural, some of them religious, and a lot of them poverty-driven. Another area of focus is creating opportunities for women to break into the economy.

We met with a youth organization called PAJER in Rwanda that came up with a type of banking system in which women can borrow and earn money and invest in one another's businesses.

Why Africa? In the '90s a friend of mine took a trip to visit AIDS orphanages in Ethiopia. I looked at his pictures and was completely blown away by everyone's spirit. Soon after that, I started working on a documentary about orphans in Ethiopia. My friends used to say that I would come back with an orphan. It turns out, they were right—but it took me three years to adopt my son, Eyob, so it wasn't nearly that simple.

For so many Americans, the African experience is completely foreign.

How do you get people here to relate to what's going on there? Whenever I talk about it, I try to speak to our mutual humanity. Eyob came from Ethiopia, and now he's an American boy going to school with kids in Nashville. Sometimes it's hard to see outside the confines of our own country, but a lot of issues we face are similar around the globe. We're all human beings. Taking a closer look at the world helps us look at ourselves.

President Obama recently visited Kenya and spoke about women's empowerment in his last speech. Why do you think now's the time for change?

Because it really needed to happen yesterday. Thankfully, it's not too late to make real progress. —CLAIRE STERN

The Annual InStyle + HFPA Festival Bash

AT THE WINDSOR ARMS HOTEL

The InStyle and Hollywood Foreign Press Association's annual fête, presented by Max Mara, brought the festival's biggest stars to Yorkville's French-inspired ballroom. Inside, 8-year-old Room star Jacob Tremblay met his hero, Eddie Redmayne; Sarah Silverman gave Susan Sarandon the giggles; and Elizabeth Olsen caught up with Dakota Johnson over cocktails. "TIFF feels so élite," Olsen says. "When you have a movie here, you feel grateful and excited ... and nervous!"

We're no prudes, but let's face it—the flesh parade at the MTV Video Music Awards was a tad much. At least one actress made a stand for good taste, in this hourglass jumpsuit that was daring in its own right. "I loved it, so I went with it," Steinfeld says of the cream wool combo of a cool cape and wild flares. "I do feel like this is a place you can take risks." Of the fashion kind, that is.

Crisp, clean, and concise but never boring, the high-contrast combination of black and white creates a striking visual effect, seen here in sharp-pleat insets, two-toned fabrics, and complementary, origami-like compositions. Perfect harmony is achieved with a bright pop of color on the lips.

TALK TO ME

Giambattista Valli

One of the rare designers to rise to the rank of haute couturier (under his own name, no less), Valli is celebrating his 10th anniversary with a dynamic new silhouette for ready-to-wear and a more youthful collection called Giamba. And there's still plenty of extravagant froth left to go around for his red-carpet fans

BY ERIC WILSON

the LOOK TALK TO ME... GIAMBATTISTA VALLI

Q Your collections have become so incredibly opulent over the past two seasons. What's behind the new look?

A Everyone was saying, "Oh, he does the Valli dresses." And I really don't like to be put in a corner. Of course, dresses are the strongest things I've done until now, but I love the idea of the graphic tunic and trousers together. It looks even dressier than a dress. It is important to remember that I am Roman by birth, so there is always a very baroque, very Caravaggio side of me, and I'm Parisian by work, which is the more introspective side that says less is more. It is a balance of the two things.

Q You show your ready-to-wear, couture, and Moncler Gamme Rouge collections in Paris and your new Giamba collection in Milan. As a designer, do you consider yourself more French or more Italian?

A I don't understand much of France. I never go outside Paris. And Milan can be complicated. I'm saying something mean, but the people there are less welcoming. It's a little harder. So I just say I'm Parisian or Roman.

Q You dress such a broad range of women, from Lee Radziwill to Rihanna. What do they have in common?

A I think it's about a state of mind. They are all leaders who have their own ideas. They are effortless in a way, not part of a trend, and the opposite of bourgeois. It's not even about someone who's breaking the rules but about someone who doesn't know there are rules to break.

Q I saw a picture of Amal Clooney coming out of a restaurant recently, with you in the background [far right].

A That was just an informal dinner between friends! When we first met, in Milan, she was

Valli with models in the psychedelic fall couture show

New options for fall: mod dresses and tunic combos preparing for her wedding, and we had this feeling of knowing each other for ages. It's a little bit of a secret that when I design, I sketch with real women in mind. I always think of someone potentially wearing the clothes, like Amal or Bianca Brandolini d'Adda, and sometimes I have sketches lined up on the floor, building up a story, imagining them all talking to each other.

Q What was your relationship with women like when you were growing up?

A They were my best friends. I was not the kind of kid who was attached to the skirt of Mamma at all. The first time my eyes really stopped on a woman was with Claudia Cardinale in The Leopard. But it was not because of her beauty. It was her inner life, the way she was laughing in an almost vulgar way. She was alive in the middle of this dead aristocracy.

Q Your name comes up for every big job opening in Paris. Why not design for another house?

A I already did, for Emanuel Ungaro [from 1998 to 2004]. And I really enjoyed it, but it was not my story. There are actors, and there are those who do voice-overs, dubbing movies in French or Italian. I'm not a translator. I want to speak with my own voice and mind. I want to sign my own name.

Donna Karan Starts Her Next Chapter

As the designer closes the book on her signature label, she begins to tell the best story of all: her own

BY ERIC WILSON

Barbra Streisand knows Donna Karan best. "She is the most scattered, disorganized human being you'll ever meet," Streisand writes of her friend of more than 30 years in a foreword to the designer's fascinating new memoir, My Journey (Ballantine Books, $30; randomhousebooks.com). "Chaos is her middle name."

That's Karan. Impulsive, mystical, challenging, and also incredibly inspiring, she rarely fails to be surprised by her own success—a megabrand based on solving a working woman's wardrobe with "seven easy pieces."

"Even though I'm Donna Karan, I don't see myself as Donna Karan," she says, flipping at the strap of her black bodysuit as if to double-check that she designed it. "I'm pretty amazed by it myself sometimes."

On the shaded patio of the Sag Harbor, N.Y., Urban Zen store, Karan's wellness-centered retail concept, she seems remarkably centered after having stunned the fashion world one month earlier by announcing she was leaving her job as chief designer of her signature label. LVMH, which bought the company in 2001, said it would suspend the Donna Karan collection and instead focus on DKNY, which unveils a new look by Public School designers Dao-Yi Chow and Maxwell Osborne for spring. (Karan retains her interest in Urban Zen.)

Of the change, Karan says, "I feel somewhat OK. It was still very difficult because of the effect this decision would have on so many people, knowing that it's time to open the doors to another generation."

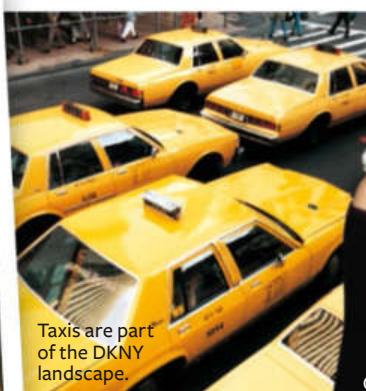

Was there drama? A long-running one, if you've followed the tale of Karan's rise through fashion, from being Anne Klein's lead assistant to a global humanitarian. She decided to add a final chapter to the book addressing her departure. ("People are going to be reading this like a Hebrew book," says Karan's confidante and spokeswoman for 30 years, Patti Cohen. "Back to front.") But you'll have to read on for the rest of the story.

Your book, just like the program notes for every one of your shows, ends with the words "To be continued..."
So what happens now?

My next chapter. I don't believe in planning anything, because whatever you plan, I guarantee God has got it set up a whole different way. I want to take a little break and look at it very carefully. I'm not that young anymore. I'm

Woman to Woman

From "cold shoulder" cutouts to the first female president (at least in an ad), Karan created a perfect world in her own image.

the LOOK LOOK SMART

not that old. How do I want to live my life? There's a big part of me that wants to do this motorcycle diary. I love working with artisans in Haiti. I'd like to document that and travel the world. There are so many places I haven't been. Would you believe I have never been to China?

Did you have any idea you were leaving the company when you decided to write this book?

I wanted to reflect back and say what my life was all about. I do things a little bit selfishly, and I really did this for me, to explore everything and get through it. Actually, I don't know if I'm ready to have people read it. But the ending is not that different from what you would expect. What I wrote is just a little more informative about how difficult it was for me to separate from the company. And I'm not saying it's over. It was a bit shocking, but I know it was the right thing to do.

I can't even imagine New York fashion without Donna Karan. How did you know this was the time to go?

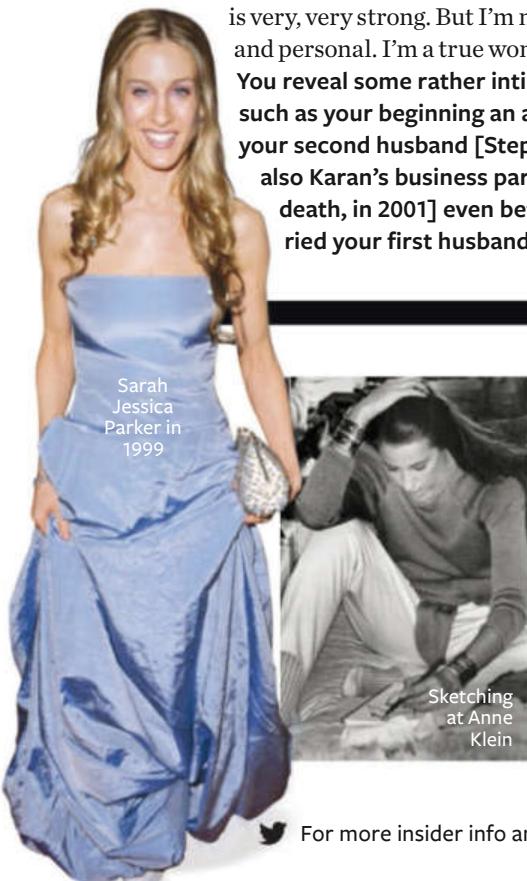

I don't think it was me doing it. There is a higher self out there. I was talking about it for so long, but I knew I wasn't ready until now. It's like when I was leaving Anne Klein, when I was carrying on like a lunatic [Karan was famously fired by the owners of the label, but they later financed her new company]. That was the biggest struggle, to be patient and wait for everything to really happen on its own.

What did you learn about yourself throughout all this?

How much more vulnerable I am than I thought I was. Everybody thinks, Oh, Donna Karan, she's so strong. I'm not. There's an inner core of creativity that I will tell you is very, very strong. But I'm more emotional and personal. I'm a true woman.

You reveal some rather intimate details, such as your beginning an affair with your second husband [Stephan Weiss, also Karan's business partner until his death, in 2001] even before you married your first husband.

My life is my life. It's my family, my exploration, my wanting to help other people when I see a problem and can find a solution. I would never want to hurt any human being, but I felt the story of Stephan was truly a love story. There are few times in your life that you have that kind of love, so don't pass it by when it happens. I don't know how he would feel about the book, actually. I think my grandchildren are going to be more surprised about the book than anybody. I don't think they'll read it, really. To them I'm Grandma, not Donna Karan.

“The competition today is outrageous.”

Are you at all relieved to be stepping away from the runways after 30 years?

The competition today is outrageous. You're dealing with a huge amount of stuff to buy out there, and the customer is confused. She's buying items, not collections. There used to be a time when we didn't have as much access to fashion, and now there is too much. The timing is crazy too. When it's hot out, you walk in most stores and there will be shearling coats. And god forbid you need snow boots in winter.

Well, if you were to design a collection of seven easy pieces that would solve all of fashion's problems for today, what would they be?

They haven't changed: The bodysuit, the pant, the legging, the sweater, the leather jacket, the dress, the scarf. I was born into this field, whether I wanted to be or not. That's what I find so fascinating, even to this moment, is that you have to wait to find out what is calling you. In the end, it's your health and your personal relationships that are most important. Don't lose faith in that, because you're only as good as your last collection.

As much as we love these stories and the writing, that's not really what matters. It's the small things in life.

Though he's deadly as Finnick Odair in this month's finale of The Hunger Games, the dashing English actor is really just an old-fashioned softie he sky hangs heavy and sullen on a muggy day in London. But Sam Claflin looks positively breezy. Sporting a pair of light blue jeans, a white linen shirt with its two top buttons undone to reveal a polite amount of chest hair, a tussled mane, and day-old stubble, he could be one of the more suave guests at a summer pool party. And he does, indeed, have a swashbuckling air about him. As Finnick Odair in The Hunger Games and Philip Swift in Pirates of the Caribbean: On Stranger Tides, the 29-year-old Ipswich-born actor has the swagger, skill set, and sexiness of a young Errol Flynn. But right now, with eyes glimmering in the low light of the Hoxton Holborn Hotel's lounge, Claflin sinks into a slouchy chair to sip a cappuccino and admits, "In general, I'm very feminine, much more of a darling than a—" he pulls his chin to his neck and affects a gruff voice: "—mate." Then he adds chirpily, "If you know what I mean." His smile is wide and bashful, with dimples halfway up his cheeks. And then he tells me—spoiler alert—how he dies.

So, Sam, let's cut to the chase. As anyone who has read the trilogy of books knows, in the next installment of Hunger Games: The Mockingjay Part II [out this month], your character gets "decapitated by a lizard muttation." How do you even begin to prepare for that?

That was the hardest day of work I've ever done. I was continually fighting, killing one stunt guy after another, and all for a grizzly end.

But that's why one goes into acting, right? The thrill of victory, the agony of defeat.

Weirdly, yes. I was very sporty growing up, and through drama school I focused more on fight choreography and stage combat and less on Shakespeare. My dad and I enjoyed watching action films: all the Bonds, Braveheart, Gladiator. Lots of epic historical films. But The Goonies was and is my favorite movie.

And what about your mother?

She hates those sorts of movies. Homeward Bound was a big favorite of hers.

In your next film, the heartstring tugger Me Before You, you play Will Traynor, a paralyzed man. You're also in talks to play Robin Friday, an English soccer player who died at age 38. Even Finnick, though superheroic, is human in the end. You seem attracted to the mortal in an age when so many actors are donning capes and masks.

I'm open-minded. If the right script came along, I would happily jump aboard. But the main thing is, I want to be challenged in new ways and work with interesting people. I'm not in a rush to win an Oscar or even try to go down that route.

You've got a bit of a tween fan base. Do you feel pressure to act in a certain way? Is it something you discuss with your wife, who is also an actress?

I suppose I have a certain following that my wife, Laura [Haddock], doesn't. But in general, she's much more publicly scrutinized—for everything from how she behaves to what she wears—than I am. As we're both actors, we don't talk much about it. To us, it's just normal. As for my fans, I'm respectful of the age group that's interested in me. I try not to swear much, and, well... it's a difficult balance. I like to drink, and I have a tattoo, but I keep it quiet. I don't want kids saying, "He's got one, so I'll get one."

What's your tattoo of?

It's a red and black swallow on my inner left bicep.

Who did you look up to as a kid?

That's easy—David Beckham. I've played football every day of my life.

Oh, he has a ton of tattoos. You guys could bond over that. Have you met him?

No. I was at a party and he was there, but I was too nervous to approach him. It's the second time I've really been quite speechless and giddy and childish. I hate the selfie thing, but I saw Paul Rudd in a hotel in New York, and I have a secret man crush on him. I wanted to take a picture with him, but I said to myself, "I can't stoop to that level." I wish I had, though. I was telling my wife, who knows I love him, that I saw him and she said, "Prove it," and I couldn't.

What's your issue with selfies?

I was in the gym the other day when these two women arrived in their gym gear. After taking 10 minutes' worth of selfies in front of the mirror, they went to every machine in turn and took more, with that little duck face people pull. It really bothered me. Their workout consisted of them taking photos of themselves on equipment. It's a vanity the world has taken on. I don't feel like I've worked out unless I'm dripping with sweat and probably looking my worst. Why do people want to see that? I think it's part of a larger issue of how much we depend on computers. Even in my work, I worry about how much we rely on CGI. Animation is getting so good that soon we'll just be voices, then manufactured voices and out of a job.

Would you prefer to be in another era, doing the lo-fi epics Errol Flynn did?

Yeah, I think I would. They literally slap their thighs and the music comes in at exactly the right moment. But I don't know if people back then took those action films seriously.

Is being taken seriously a big concern?

It's quite low down [laughs]. I think there are parts of me that would like to be taken seriously. But a lot of roles are offered to someone who's better or more handsome.

Can anyone really be more handsome, Sam?

There's a Hollywood hierarchy, and the same parts are offered to the same people. There's a pool, and I'm on the outskirts trying to get in. I'm very lucky, though. I have friends who would happily do the script I've just said no to. It's a first-world problem, but it is a problem I'm having. ■

Buying online has turned shopping into a totally different experience. I buy almost everything online. Amazon is still my favorite. I trust it completely. And the same is true for any well-known brands. When it comes to ordering, the key is knowing where to go for high-quality items. This is one place where you don't want to take too many chances with risky pieces—stick with what you know you're comfortable in so you won't have to worry about shipping back anything that just doesn't work out.

COLORFUL COAT + TOP- HANDLE BAG

During the winter months your everyday outerwear becomes a personal-style calling card. And while neutrals are a fail-safe choice, there's something to be said about a coat that can instantly brighten the dreariest of days. To provide plenty of impact, try a statement stunner in a pretty pastel or warm saturated hue like cinnamon. Team with a structured frame bag in cool contrasting shades and you'll look refined and ladylike but not precious. Plus, the duo adds polish to virtually anything you have on underneath, which might make venturing out in the cold that much easier.

YOU CAN DO THE NEW MENSWEAR

It's really quite simple to take on a trend. Just follow this smart advice from InStyle's Cindy Weber Cleary

Picture it: Me at age 8, decked out in my finest on Christmas Day at my grandparents' house. But instead of the typical velvet dress, I'm wearing a black-and-white houndstooth pantsuit (and white go-go boots!). Back then, during the real Mad Men era, I remember thinking that my dad's style was downright dashing. And my love of masculine tweeds, checks, and silhouettes continues to this day—though, thankfully, my taste in footwear has evolved.

How to Pull It Off...

1 Going all in on this look can be superchic (think Marlene Dietrich), but it takes a lot of confidence to commit head to toe. Instead, try mixing in a few feminine pieces with your tailoring, such as sexy shoes, a delicate camisole, or long earrings.

2 If you're youngish, you can do the reverse: Team borrowed-from-the-boys extras—loafers, a natty fedora—with a silky short dress for an edgy contrast. I suggest staying away from ties, but a skinny black scarf worn undone with a white shirt would look great with a black leather mini.

3 You really can't go wrong with a sharply cut overcoat. It's a worthy investment that pairs equally well with jeans and a turtleneck or with an LBD.

Jane Fonda shows how to own a look into your 50s and beyond

1 Get glowing Never underestimate the power of a little strategically placed rouge. "It gives life to the skin and makes you look healthy," says Fonda's pro, Charlotte Willer, who uses a blush and a highlighter quad to add color and luminosity. For the most fresh-faced effect, apply from the cheek up toward the temple in a C shape. "It visually lifts the face up."

2 Suit yourself

Make like a sharp-dressed man and choose a tailored blazer and trousers on nights when you need to get decked out. It's a confident approach that oozes well-heeled sophistication, especially in elegant ivory.

I love my beanie for winter, but lately it seems kind of blah, like I need to do more with it. Any suggestions?

#AskInStyle

@InStyle While there's no denying the hipster appeal of this laid-back look, we do agree it can feel a little boring, and perhaps even too casual, at times. To amp things up, think beyond your solid standby and go for one boasting a multi-colored pom-pom, like those spotted at Gucci, or get even more playful with a version decked out with gemstones. A glittering gold knit becomes daytime-appropriate when anchored with subdued silver. The trick, as with all of these options, is to let your hat steal the show by choosing a relatively low-key coat. Now just swipe on a red lip and you're ready to face the next polar vortex in style.

COAT Check

Too bulky, too long, too meh: Don't let outerwear ruin a chic winter outfit. We break down which styles go best with the trickier items in your closet so you can look polished and stay warm

If you're wearing a suit, try a... MAXI COAT

The goal: long, lean, and put together. Get there with a topper that skims your body in a straight line and hits about four inches above your pants hem. The more tailored the trouser legs, the slimmer the overall silhouette.

The Switzerland of statement lips, cocoa manages to remain neutral while still commanding attention. The key to your success lies in finding a lipstick that reads more multidimensional than muddy: If you have fair to medium skin, pick a hue with a berry undertone, says N.Y.C. makeup pro Genevieve Herr, referencing the shade she used on Katie Holmes. If you have darker skin, a hint of sparkling plum will ensure the look doesn't fall flat.

Two friends walk into the fragrance aisle at a crowded department store. One shudders and makes a beeline for the shoe section while the other barely notices the tsunami of aromas. Been there? Turns out a person's "receptiveness" has a huge impact on the perception (and appreciation) of fragrance.

Amy Synnott sniffs out the best blends across the spectrum

I've always known there was something a little unusual about my sense of smell. It is (and has always been) twitchy, like a raw, exposed nerve. When I was a child, the prospect of being stuck in a small elevator with an old lady and her noxious cloud of perfume was enough to make me break out in hives. I had a particularly hard time with spicy fragrances and powdery florals. On the other hand, there were some scents—the wild roses that blanketed the rocky shoreline near our beach house in Ogunquit, Maine, or the sweet lilies of the valley that grew in a dark corner of our backyard in Wellesley, Mass.—that had the opposite effect on me. They were my own Breakfast at Tiffany's, a sensory refuge where I could take a few intoxicating whiffs and begin to feel calm and centered again.

In high school my aversion to heavy, synthetic fragrances intensified. This was the '80s, the era of bold, brash perfumes like Giorgio and Yves Saint Laurent's Opium. My best friend wore Poison, and it grew like a black mold between us. I literally could not stand to be in the same room with her when she was wearing that famously sweet and potent perfume. (I later found out she was equally repulsed by the clean fragrances I gravitated toward. How, I wondered in my sensory self-absorption, could anyone be repulsed by the smell of fresh grapefruit? Or Aveda's Shampure, to this day one of my all-time favorite scents?)

It turns out our radically different perceptions of scent weren't all that unusual. "We all exist on a sensory spectrum," says Dr. Ted Zeff, author of The Highly Sensitive Person's Survival Guide. "About 20 percent of the population has a very sensitive nervous system. These are the people who feel things more deeply, and that often includes scent. In my research I found many of them struggle with synthetic fragrances." Natural essential oils are often easier to take in and process, he says. And many have beneficial effects: "Consider something like lavender. If you are an HSP and you inhale that, it can calm you down. It's the same with chamomile and rose. These oils all reduce stress."

Dr. Zeff says that whenever he—a self-diagnosed HSP—sits next to someone wearing a synthetic perfume on an airplane, he gets a headache. It should be noted that there are a variety of other reasons—including allergies and asthma—someone might become highly reactive to perfume. But in many cases, Dr. Zeff believes, it can simply be chalked up to an overactive sensory system. Sometimes the fragrance doesn't have to be particularly strong or even unnatural to elicit a nasty reaction. "I once had a fragrance that I loved," explained a colleague of mine. "But then someone I disliked asked me what it was and started to wear it every day. Now I can't even smell that fragrance without getting in a bad mood." To an average person, this story might sound a little crazy. But as Dr. Zeff notes, highly sensitive people feel everything more intensely, and that often includes not just the aroma of the scent but the emotions generated by it.

To comprehend this fully, it helps to know how scent is processed in the brain. When we inhale a fragrance, it travels to the olfactory bulb, which is right next to the hippocampus, otherwise known as the seat of memory. This explains why, after many days frolicking along the shore of Ogunquit, I came to associate those heady wild roses with the carefree happiness of summer. It also explains why my husband should never have used his favorite cologne as a dog deodorizer.

On the other end of the sensory spectrum are people with an underdeveloped—or what some sensory-integration specialists call a hyposensitive—sense of smell. Some people are just born this way; others lose their powers of olfaction due to health or environmental reasons. "There are a number of things that can diminish one's sense of smell," says Dorene Petersen, chair of the Aromatherapy Registration Council. "One of the first things to look at is zinc intake. This mineral is intimately connected to a healthy sense of smell, and it's quite a common deficiency." Smoking can also reduce the efficacy of your sniffer, as can aging, medications, chemical exposure, and a host of medical issues. My late father, who suffered from asthma, completely lost his sense of smell as a child (this condition, known as anosmia, can occur when the olfactory bulb is blocked by swelling or nasal polyps). You could literally spray an entire bottle of Love's Baby Soft on his pillow and he wouldn't smell it. Interestingly, since scent is closely tied to our gustatory sense, he could barely taste his food. While I, a hypersensitive child, recoiled at the slightest hint of red hot chili flakes in my tacos, my dad would routinely pour a bottle of Tabasco sauce over almost everything he ate (eggs, stew, pig knuckles, pickled herring). He made a sport out of repulsing us kids with his eccentric culinary habits—which I now realize were made possible by the slowly firing nerve receptors in his embattled asthmatic nose.

So what does all this mean in terms of choosing a signature perfume? A lot. Armed with a better understanding of your unique sensory and emotional profile, you'll have an easier time navigating the sea of overwhelming choices. And about that colleague in the next office who just dropped a bottle of perfume on the carpet? Fill a spritzing bottle with equal parts vinegar and water and spray liberally. I swear it will help.

Are You a Highly Sensitive Person?

Not all HSPs struggle with fragrance, but many do, says Cliff Harwin, author of Making Sense of Your High Sensitivity (The Highly Sensitive Person Publishing Company, $9; amazon.com). Take this quiz to see whether any of these characteristics sound like you. If you check off three or more boxes, you are probably highly sensitive.

- You have a strong need for alone time.
- You are easily affected by caffeine and alcohol.
- You are deeply moved by art and music and have a rich interior life.
- You have a long-standing relationship with ear plugs and eye masks.
- You sometimes tear up in the middle of an emotionally charged conversation (even a positive one).

THE BEAUTY SCENE

Masters of the I-(literally)-woke-up-like-this look, "people in the U.K. are snobs about looking as though you've tried too hard," says London-based Steer. In fact, "seeming to have made an effort is somewhat un-British," says Hampshire-born Chung. Not surprisingly, Steer says women value "time-saving, multi-benefit products." But they can have a bit of fun with their routines. "We're not afraid to play with a little makeup," Steer says. So long as it doesn't come off as too perfect.

CULT CLASSIC

The Skin Preserver

Following a 2007 BBC documentary that showed how the Boots Protect & Perfect beauty serum helped reduce the look of wrinkles, there was, and continues to be, a frenzy surrounding it, says Steer. This updated version packs even more line-fighting peptides than the original.

THE BEAUTY SCENE

YouTube tutorials tend to have less impact on a girl's routine than her own family. "Mothers teach kids early on about how to care for their skin from head to toe," says Mexico City-based López. Many in Mexico also pass down DIY beauty remedies: López applies local aloe vera to her hair, while Coatzacoalcos-born Hayek based her skin-care line Nuance on natural recipes learned from her grandmother. "She taught me how to use native Mexican ingredients," says Hayek, who fills products with plant extracts like passion fruit.

The Must-Have Styler

"A lot of places here are hot and humid. This leave-in cream is amazing for taming frizz," says López. "It makes hair shiny and supersoft without weighing it down."

Davines Love Hair Smoother, $24; davines.com.

The Soothing Face Wash

"In Mexico, extracts from the tepezcohuite tree have been used on burn victims," says Hayek, who added the ingredient to her moisturizing, oil-rich cleanser.

CULT CLASSIC

The Major Mascara

"I swear, whenever I interview any Mexican celebrity, they say that they love this mascara," says López. "It's infused with mamey-seed oil." The fruit is loaded with vitamins and helps condition lashes.

THE BEAUTY SCENE

Life is lived outdoors Down Under, which is why "the importance of SPF is instilled from a young age," says Sydney-based D'Onofrio. Since many women have active lifestyles, there's a penchant for no-fuss skin care and fresh-looking makeup, she says. "And we've got a significant trend toward natural and organic products here," says Gunnedah-born Kerr. "We have access to a lot of rare, indigenous ingredients," says D'Onofrio, citing vitamin C-rich Kakadu plum.

The Sun Shield

"Besides being one of the highest SPF products available here, this liquid contains the antioxidant duo of vitamins C and E," says D'Onofrio. "Plus, it's sheer, not greasy."

The Does-It-All Balm

"I have one of these in my handbag, car, desk, and bedside table," says D'Onofrio. "It has 100 percent pure lanolin, and it locks in moisture. I use it on my lips, cuticles, and even minor cuts."

THE BEAUTY SCENE

Is it any wonder that the country that gave us Gisele's waves has hair on the brain? "Almost 90 percent of women have had some treatment for color or texture done," says São Paulo-based Tibério. But salons aren't just service spots—they're social clubs: "There's at least one in every neighborhood; friends go to the salon together," she says. Another beauty hub? Many Korean women want to look like "they've got skin that is naturally flawless," says Seoul-based Han. But make no mistake—there's much effort involved. A 10-step skin-care regimen is not out of the question. But that might be why routines are "less about concealing and more about maintaining your complexion," says Kim, who lives primarily in Seoul. ## BEAUTY TALK

Cara Delevingne

There's a lot more to discuss than those full brows: The model turned actress, who's the face of Burberry fragrance and YSL Beauté, chats about keeping her skin clear, her mind zen, and those movie roles coming

What's the best beauty tip you've ever scored?

Joan Collins, my godmother, has impeccable skin and always told me to stay out of the sun, which I find hard to do. Oh, and if I'm in a hotel, I sleep with a humidifier on. The air conditioning is really bad for your skin and throat. It dries you out. So that's something I always do.

And how do you feel about fragrance? Can you recall your first scent memory?

My dad always smelled like Acqua di Parma cologne. And my mother, she always used to smoke cigarettes, so that was a big part of her smell. My granny is a bit of a hoarder, and she would always keep old perfume bottles. I used to collect them too. I'd play with them in the bath, filling them up and pouring them out. I found them to be so much fun.

Do you wear perfume now?

I do, yeah. I forget to apply it sometimes because I try to take only 10 minutes getting ready in the morning. But I do like to smell good, I promise!

With such a tight beauty routine, is there one thing you do every morning, no matter what?

Beauty-wise? I wake up and do yoga. I started doing it about a year ago, and now I do it every morning and night. Yoga saved me; it's changed my life. I notice a difference when I do it. I feel more focused—more like I don't have a million things going on in my brain at once.

And you're acting now. How does that compare with modeling?

I always felt like I was acting when I was modeling, because I never really felt like a model. Modeling is about what's on the outside. Acting's about what's on the inside. —ANGELIQUE SERRANO ➤

10 WAYS TO

Give Your Face a Lift

Stop on Red

For the most youthful appearance, try skipping that bold lip, "which can appear aggressive and pull your face down," says L'Oréal makeup artist Sir John. Instead, he advises keeping lips soft by slightly overdrawing them with a pinkish beige liner for a fuller look and then finishing with neutral lipstick.

2 Open Your Eyes

Who knew drawing a simple line could revive tired lids? A cat eye can "immediately raise up your entire face," says Sir John. "Place a dot outside the outer corner of each eye, where you want the wing to end up. Starting at the tear duct, trace your lash lines until you get to the outer edge and then flick up toward the dot."

L'Oréal Paris Infallible Gel Never Fail Lacquer Liner 24H in black, $10; drugstore.com.

Apply falsies with black-tinted glue that blends with your liner.

GABRIELLE UNION

3 Tighten Up

The Roloxin Lift, a rinse-off mask, deposits silica and polymers to iron out lines for up to 24 hours. Want a longer-lasting fix? Dermatologist favorite Ultherapy (sessions run upwards of $1,500) uses ultrasound to heat the dermis and underlying muscle, producing a shrink-wrap-like effect that takes a few months to kick in and can last two years, says N.Y.C. dermatologist Anne Chapas.

Roloxin Lift, $110/10; sephora.com.

4 Lash Out

The eyes have it—the first signs of aging and the consequences of too little sleep, that is. But it's nothing faux lashes can't solve, or at least minimize. Just take a strip, cut it in half, and then glue the inner section along the edge of your lids to create an elongated lash line, extending it just past the outer corner. "Stronger lashes make the eyes look more lively and awake," says Sir John, who counts Beyoncé and Gabrielle Union as clients.

Ardell No. 109 Lashes, $4/set; ulta.com.

5 Conceal Last

"When shadow is applied, powder can fall and land under your eyes, making you look worn out," says Sir John. Dabbing on concealer after you've put on other makeup "gives you an instant luminizing boost," he says. Chanel makeup artist Kate Lee, who works with Keira Knightley, says to go one shade lighter than your skin: "Pat it right up into your lash lines to raise the outer corners of the lids."

BEAUTY 10 WAYS TO

Shine a “Strobe” Light

Use illuminator on the top of your cheekbones, brow bones, and jawline, says Lee, who prefers liquid or cream formulas for their blendability. “You want to attract light to the high points of the face,” she says. “This enhances your skin’s texture and makes it appear more taut.” But, she adds, “avoid sparkle—it’s the enemy if you’re trying to look younger.”

Becca Shimmering
Skin Perfector Poured
in Moonstone, $38;
sephora.com.

Zap It

Getting your bounce back might take a (non-painful) shock to the system. Nano-current treatments can ramp up production of ATP, a co-enzyme found in the skin that helps increase collagen and elastin. The currents also promote lymphatic drainage, especially important around “the jowls and cheekbones and under the eyes, where excess fluid can make the face look saggy,” says L.A. aesthetician Melanie Simon. “With devices like these, you can get instant and long-term sculpting.” ZIIP Nano-Current Skincare Device, $495; ziipbeauty.com for more information.

Get Plumped

Collagen starts to decrease with age, so we lose fullness in our faces. A simple way to counteract this downward trend? Increase the skin’s hydration levels, which has a plumping effect, says L.A. aesthetician Kate Somerville. At home, apply hyaluronic-acid-rich products, like Somerville’s DermalQuench (the newest version, available this month, has collagen-boosting retinol too). At the dermatologist’s, check out “hyaluronic-acid-based fillers like Voluma, which can fill out hollows and lift cheeks,” says Dr. Chapas, who adds that results may last from one to two years (one treatment costs about $1,200).

Hit the Hair Salon

Don't let your strands keep you down: "Long, blunt cuts can have a dragging effect," says Garnier stylist

Tommy Buckett. But short framing layers with body (like those on Cate Blanchett) visually pull everything up. The rule also applies to color. "Partial highlights around the front brighten up the face," says colorist Adrian Wallace of N.Y.C.'s Rita Hazan Salon, who suggests sticking with complexion-softening neutral to golden tones. Prefer balayage? Just make sure you don't wait so long between touch-ups that the color reaches below eye level.

Garnier Fructis Full & Plush Ends Plumper Amplifying Leave-In Serum, $6; garnierusa.com.

Raise Some Brows

A full arch definitely makes you appear younger, but creating the right shape is also key. For the most fresh-faced look, eschew a straight, boyish style: "Leave the thickness in the front, in line with the inner corners of your eyes," says N.Y.C. brow expert Sania Vucetaj. "Then remove stray hairs beneath the arch and from below the tail so it extends outward instead of down, which can make eyes look droopy."

Why I Love It...

1 It says “look at me” without your having to tug at your hemline all night. A smudge of subtle peach shadow this is not. This is makeup that gets you noticed—and possibly grammed by random beauty bloggers you pass on the street.

2 It’s unexpected. Unlike bright red lips, these edgy styles have not been watered down by overexposure. It’s safe to say you’ll be the only member of your squad sporting a double cat eye on your next GNO.

3 It’s flattering. You may be thinking, This is fine if you’re Nicki Minaj or Gigi Hadid, but what about us mere mortals? Turn the page. As you’ll see, there’s an iteration that works for pretty much every eye shape.

COLORING OUTSIDE the LINES

When it comes to creativity, eyeliner is giving nail art a run for its wow factor. Double lines, squared-off cat eyes, blunt edges—name the trend and makeup artists have tried it backstage this season (and in many cases, it's turned out incredibly cool). One word of advice: To avoid looking like an '80s flashback, resist the impulse to pair this with hot pink lips.

RAG &amp; BONE

SCI-FI

Makeup artist Gucci Westman describes her look for Rag & Bone as a cross between Jean Seberg in Breathless and Milla Jovovich in The Fifth Element. What makes this unique? Two thirds of the lower lid is kept bare while the wing initially drawn on is wiped off, leaving a straight horizontal edge in lieu of a dainty point at the corners.

Ideal for: Small eyes with hooded lids because this technique really opens up the eye.

Nars #47 Angled Eyeliner Brush ($28) and Eye Paint in Black Valley ($25); narscosmetics.com.

ANNA SUI

TWIN PEAKS

The theme for Anna Sui was all about Viking beauty, so CoverGirl makeup artist Pat McGrath dreamed up a "fresh-faced warrior woman." Leaving both the upper and lower lids clean, she drew two long lines out from the corner of each eye using brown pencil.

Ideal for: Almond eyes. Like its tamer cousin, the classic cat eye, McGrath's double flick perfectly accentuates this shape of eye while visually lifting the upper lid.

BADGLEY MISCHKA

THE FLAMENCO

"You know those Spanish dancers who snap their fingers and give you that sexy attitude? We wanted to bring that feeling to the makeup," explains makeup artist Tom Pecheux, who painted giant square wings on models' eyes at Badgley Mischka. After outlining the shape with black gel liner, he went over it with an ink blue pen. "It's powerful but a bit rebellious."

Ideal for: Round peepers because the strong horizontal shape draws the eye outward.

PRO SECRETS

WHY FRENCH GIRLS
LOOK SO FRESH

Co-founder of anti-aging skin-care line Caudalie and author of The French Beauty Solution, Mathilde Thomas shares her chic commandments, complete with DIY recipes to get glowing as well as generations-old tricks from her grand-mère

1 ALWAYS
PAMPER SKIN

The mark of an effective regimen shouldn't be a red face inflamed with the sting of abrasion. Your daily routine, however long, should delight the senses. "It also doesn't need to be expensive," says Thomas, who, while growing up in the French Alps, whipped up natural remedies with her grandmother, like gentle exfoliants powered by dried oats. This weekly mask is still a favorite: Honey moisturizes, while acids in the lemon resurface.

Honey Mask

1 tbsp lemon juice
1/4 cup honey

Mix and apply to skin.
Rinse off after 10 minutes.

2 BATH TIME
IS SACRED

"Beauty treatments shouldn't stop at your chin," says Thomas. After a soak, the author recommends massaging limbs with antioxidant-packed oils (you can buy a premade blend or make your own with oils like argan and grapeseed). This practice hydrates, and the kneading motion increases circulation to help plump and smooth the look of skin.

Bliss Stimulating Massage Tool, $22; blissworld.com. Caudalie Divine Oil, $49; us.caudalie.com.

3 LESS IS MORE

The key to achieving that Parisian nonchalance? Mastering the no-makeup makeup approach. "French women never appear as though they've tried too hard," she says. Thomas's five-minute face begins with shots of her hydrating, antioxidant-infused Beauty Elixir, "which is like Nespresso for my skin." Dark mascara and a dose of shimmering blush give her complexion a natural-looking radiance, she says.

Nars blush in Orgasm, $30; narscosmetics.com. Caudalie Beauty Elixir, $49; us.caudalie.com.

4 RED IS BEST

Since 1995, Caudalie's formulations have maximized the potency of the grape in the form of polyphenols like resveratrol, an antioxidant that defends against skin-cell-scavenging free radicals. Not only does Thomas apply the new Resveratrol Lift Firming Serum ($82; us.caudalie.com), but she also indulges in a resveratrol-rich glass of red wine at dinnertime: "It fills the body with those antioxidants that help keep cells healthy."

5 MAKE MEALS
MINDFUL

Thomas's top gripe: women who use their ovens for storage, à la Carrie Bradshaw. "Every French-woman knows how to make a quick roast chicken," she says. In addition to cooking healthy meals with non-processed food, "I don't let anyone in my family eat in front of a screen," as it can lead to absentmindedly overindulging. Find all of Thomas's beauty recipes—and instructions for roast chicken—in her new book, The French Beauty Solution:

Got Dry Winter Skin? DEW THE RIGHT THING

Cold weather is coming, but a parched complexion doesn't have to tag along.

These smart strategies will keep you hydrated even when the temp drops below freezing

20s

Some teen habits are cool to carry into adulthood—like a weakness for Justin Timberlake. But an aggressive anti-acne routine isn't one of them. "Unless you're totally broken out, skip the daily benzoyl peroxide washes. They're very dehydrating," says New York dermatologist Ellen Marmur. Instead, use a potent yet gentle salicylic acid cleanser up to three times a week. Not plagued with pimples? Stick with creamy, sulfate-free versions, says Austin, Texas, aesthetician Renée Rouleau. And reach for a moisturizer that contains SPF to prevent sun damage, which can cause dryness later in life. CeraVe Hydrating Cleanser, $12; target.com. Elta MD UV Clear Tinted Broad-Spectrum SPF 46, $34; dermstore.com.

30s

Things start to slow down at this point, from your motivation to leave your couch on Friday nights to the speed with which your skin cells turn over—a key function for maintaining a fresh face. "When dead skin accumulates on the surface, it's like a dirty window," says Dr. Marmur. The buildup makes skin look dull. Exfoliate twice a week to get rid of the gunk. Try easy swipe-and-toss pads infused with glycolic acid. And start layering a serum with hydrating hyaluronic acid underneath your moisturizer, says Rouleau.

40s

Feeling flaky? If your anti-aging routine stars a certain vitamin A derivative famed for its ability to fight wrinkles, then you might have found your culprit, says Danbury, Conn., dermatologist Mona Gohara. Consult with your doctor about swapping your retinoid prescription for a creamier formulation, like Refissa or Renova, says Santa Monica dermatologist Karyn Grossman. If you use an over-the-counter retinol product, pick one that comes with a buffer cream, like Dermalogica's. Another trick? Mix your retinol with a super-mild lotion, like this one from Chanel.

Dermalogica Overnight Retinol Repair (with Buffer Cream), $85; dermalogica.com. Chanel La Solution 10 de Chanel, $80; chanel.com.

50+

Postmenopause, estrogen takes a nosedive, and so does sebum production. To counteract this, go for a two-pronged approach: Incorporate more essential fatty acid-rich foods, like avocado, into your diet, and pop a fish-oil supplement (aim for 1,200 mg daily). This can improve your skin's health and texture from the inside out, says Rouleau. On the surface, use thick creams made with shea butter, coconut oil, or ceramides. And top them with a few drops of face oil; that'll turn your complexion into an impenetrable force field of moisture. "Layering seals in hydration," says Rouleau.

Origins Three Part Harmony Nourishing Cream, $68; origins.com. La Mer The Renewal Oil, $240; cremedelamer.com.

The One Facial You Might Just Need Now!

WHAT IT IS The HydraFacial MD is a machine that comes with four tips to cleanse, exfoliate, and restore skin's moisture levels in 30 minutes. HOW IT WORKS Using the handheld device, a technician first soaks skin with a combination of resurfacing lactic acid and glucosamine (a hydrating and brightening amino acid compound), which loosens dead skin cells. Then the pro applies glycolic and salicylic acids. After performing a gentle microdermabrasion treatment, the technician suctions away debris, extracting dirt and bacteria from pores, and then infuses skin with antioxidants and plumping hyaluronic acid. RESULTS Our tester says the dry patches around her forehead and chin instantly vanished, along with the blackheads dotting her nose. Plus, she says her skin felt firmer and looked more refreshed. COST It starts at around $150; depending on the doctor or spa you visit, it can run up to $300 per session. DOWNTIME None. PAIN FACTOR None—if anything, it feels good. FOR MORE INFO Hydrafacial.com.

TRANSFORMATION

RIHANNA

She might be the only girl in the world who can pull off a Fanta orange bob or blue lipstick without missing a beat, but currently "she's keeping it ladylike," says her makeup pro Mylah Morales. "We're doing less out-there looks, focusing on fresh skin. Some days we even skip mascara." Don't worry, though: RiRi hasn't lost her edge. "She's a lipstick queen," says Morales. "She's in a vampy phase at the moment and will still wear deep, dark lips just to go grocery shopping!"

WAKE UP HAPPY

"I hope House of Harper allows women to take a few minutes out of their busy day to find inspiration," says Knapp.

Moments to Treasure

INSPIRATION IS EVERYWHERE YOU LOOK, SAYS HOUSTON, TEXAS BASED BLOGGER CAROLINE HARPER KNAPP. SO GO FIND IT!

Balancing fashion, family and 41,000 Instagram followers is all in a day's work for Caroline Harper Knapp, whose popular blog, House of Harper, inspires women to dress, parent and think creatively. "I know how rare it is to have a career that inspires you and still have time for your family," she says, confessing she's pregnant with a second baby boy. "I am well aware that I am blessed."

FIRST COMES LOVE

My husband's grandmother always served Milano cookies with milk," says Knapp. "Since college, my husband has continued the tradition!"

TAKE A BREAK

During Knox's afternoon nap, Knapp takes 15 minutes to breathe: "That gives me energy to power through the rest of the day."

YOU GLOW, GIRL

Her #1 rule? Be the best version of yourself. That includes sleep.

66

After a long, hectic day, the family bonds with a delicious plate of Milano cookies and together time with Knox.

Q&amp;A

RITA ORA

KATHERINE HEIGL

Q Going platinum has irritated my scalp. How can I reduce the itching and burning?

A First, rub a treatment with hydrators like glycerin onto the affected area. The bleach likely stripped your skin of moisture, says Temitayo Ogunleye, assistant professor of clinical dermatology at the University of Pennsylvania. A product containing anti-inflammatory essential oils such as eucalyptus (we like René Furterer's) will bring instant, cooling relief. Then, reassess your suds: Condition regularly, and avoid washing your hair daily, says colorist Aura Friedman of N.Y.C.'s Sally Hershberger Salon, who adds that the natural oils of your scalp will keep it calm. When you do lather up, use a shampoo made with gentle, sulfate-free cleansing agents, like those derived from coconut, to stave off fading and any further flare-ups.

IMPORTANT SAFETY INFORMATION (CONTINUED)

Do not take BOTOX® Cosmetic (onabotulinumtoxinA) if you: are allergic to any of the ingredients in BOTOX® Cosmetic (see Medication Guide for ingredients); had an allergic reaction to any other botulinum toxin product such as Myobloc® (rimabotulinumtoxinB), Dysport® (abobotulinumtoxinA), or Xeomin® (incobotulinumtoxinA); have a skin infection at the planned injection site.

Tell your doctor about all your muscle or nerve conditions, such as amyotrophic lateral sclerosis (ALS or Lou Gehrig's disease), myasthenia gravis, or Lambert-Eaton syndrome, as you may be at increased risk of serious side effects including difficulty swallowing and difficulty breathing from typical doses of BOTOX® Cosmetic.

Tell your doctor about all your medical conditions, including: plans to have surgery; had surgery on your face; weakness of forehead muscles, such as trouble raising your eyebrows; drooping eyelids; any other abnormal facial change; are pregnant or plan to become pregnant (it is not known if BOTOX® Cosmetic can harm your unborn baby); are breastfeeding or plan to breast-feed (it is not known if BOTOX® Cosmetic passes into breast milk).

Tell your doctor about all the medicines you take, including prescription and nonprescription medicines, vitamins, and herbal products. Using BOTOX® Cosmetic with certain other medicines may cause serious side effects. Do not start any new medicines until you have told your doctor that you have received BOTOX® Cosmetic in the past.

Especially tell your doctor if you: have received any other botulinum toxin product in the last 4 months; have received injections of botulinum toxin, such as Myobloc®, Dysport®, or Xeomin® in the past (be sure your doctor knows exactly which product you received); have recently received an antibiotic by injection; take muscle relaxants; take an allergy or cold medicine; take a sleep medicine; take aspirin-like products or blood thinners.

Other side effects of BOTOX® Cosmetic include: dry mouth, discomfort or pain at the injection site, tiredness, headache, neck pain, and eye problems: double vision, blurred vision, decreased eyesight, drooping eyelids, swelling of your eyelids, and dry eyes.

For more information refer to the Medication Guide or talk with your doctor.

You are encouraged to report negative side effects of prescription drugs to the FDA. Visit www.fda.gov/medwatch or call 1-800-FDA-1088.

How to Dress Like a STYLE STAR

Mixed prints! Bold color! A daring silhouette! One thing these incredibly chic women all have in common: They definitely know how to leave a lasting impression. Now you can too

FIVE WAYS to WOW

1 CHOOSE EXTRAS THAT POP Why settle for basic black all the time when you can make a statement with a vibrant (non-matchy-matchy) hue like Kerry Washington does here?

2 WEAR THE PANTS (FOR EVENING) When combined with a dramatic top and lace-up pumps, tailored trousers offer a cool alternative to your well-worn LBD (just ask Emma Watson).

3 GO MONOCHROME A pink coat is cute. A head-to-toe pink ensemble? Now that's showstopping. As Jessica Alba proves, you can never have on too much blush, especially on the dreariest days of winter.

4 MIX CLASHING PRINTS The secret to pulling off two busy patterns at once? Take a cue from Blake Lively by grounding the mismatched pieces in a similar palette. Finish with heels that pick up a key color.

5 UPGRADE YOUR OFF-DUTY GAME Just because you're running to Starbucks doesn't mean you should wear sweats. Sienna Miller shows how a blazer and pumps can make everyday jeans look effortlessly chic.

Rob Zangardi & Mariel Haenn

ON JENNIFER LOPEZ

“Her frame looks best in items that make the waist appear as small as possible while simultaneously highlighting it. The goal is to emphasize the body’s natural feminine shape. Think cropped sweaters and Ts, high-waist palazzo pants or pencil skirts, and body-con dresses. Anything belted works well too.”

Tara Swennen ON KRISTEN STEWART

“The idea is to create the illusion of an hourglass figure by accentuating the waist. If you’re not super-tall, go for a skinnier belt—the maximum width I would put on Kristen is about two inches. We also knot her T-shirts at the bottom to give definition. And V-necks achieve a leaner look while showing some décolletage.”

Johnny Wujek ON KATE MARA

“Kate is drawn to menswear, and we’ve been doing boxier silhouettes, which work with some tailoring. We take things in and also shorten them from the waist, not the hem, because she’s got a longer torso. One thing she rarely wears is gowns. Instead, we go for a romper or jumpsuit that’s tapered and a little bit cropped so she’s not drowning in it.”

Timothy Snell ON QUEEN LATIFAH

“For day, it’s about comfort. My go-to for her is a slim jean with a lot of stretch, teamed with a top that has a fluid, sexy drape. When it comes to evening, all bets are off—we opt for anything fitted or cinched to bring that extra va-va-voom. I also gravitate toward monochrome looks, which make you appear leaner by producing a long, unbroken line.”

WHAT ARE THE BEST DIRECT-SALE SHOPPING SITES?

FOR COATS

THE ARRIVALS

thearivals.com

If that designer moto jacket is a mainstay on your "Fantasy Purchase" Pinterest board, peep the latest styles from The Arrivals, which uses the same factory and materials as high-end brands do but produces outerwear at less than half the cost.

① Wool coat, The Arrivals, $385.

FOR DENIM

INDUSTRY STANDARD

industrystandardny.com

These L.A. designers wisely partnered with one of the city's best denim factories to cut out the middleman. The result? High-quality blues with just the right amount of stretch for under $150.

② Denim jeans, Industry Standard, $105.

FOR LINGERIE

NEGATIVE UNDERWEAR

negativeunderwear.com

Drawer full of nude seamless thongs got you feeling all frumpy? This line blends form with function. The sexy bras, high-waist panties, and slimming bodysuits are made of peekaboo mesh that will hold you in without showing through.

③ Polyamide-elastane bra ($55) and high-waist briefs ($45), Negative Underwear.

FOR SWIMSUITS

TRIANGL SWIM

triangl.com

These bikinis don't just make your #travelgrams look rad, but they're also kind to your backside: The neoprene material smooths lumps and retains its shape over time.

FOR OFFICE STAPLES

MM.LAFLEUR

mmlafleur.com

Put that pantsuit down and walk slowly toward your computer. This start-up gives your work wardrobe a refresh with its Bento Box service. You'll get four to six office looks, handpicked based on your size, style, and fit preferences. You'll be charged only for the pieces you keep (most are under $250), and you can send back the rest free of charge.

④ Polyester-spandex dress ($195) and leather belt ($60), MM.LaFleur.

WHAT ARE THE BEST RESOURCES FOR PLUS-SIZE WOMEN?

FASHION TO FIGURE

fashiontofigure.com

Catering especially to women sizes 12 to 26, this smart site rounds up the best designs from all the top plus-size designers and organizes them by trend so you'll never miss a street-style beat.

FITBAY

fitbay.com

Enter your dimensions and get matched with a celebrity of similar proportions. You'll also be connected with other users who share your measurements so you can swap shopping tips and favorite fits.

HAVE YOUR SHOES REPAIRED WITHOUT LEAVING HOME

Save yourself a Saturday-afternoon errand and send Cobbler Concierge your beat-up shoes for a makeover ($60/pair; cobblerconcierge.com). Simply create an account, request a pre-paid shipping box, and fill out the enclosed form to let the experts know what needs to be done. You'll have your Manolos back looking brand-new.

WHAT BAGS MAKE FOR THE BEST INVESTMENT?

Cleaning out your closet is much less dreadful when you can trade in last season's arm candy for cash. We asked the pros at luxury resale site Material Wrld which investments have the highest resale value.

Look for leather Not surprisingly, black leather is the biggest secondhand seller, but pastel hues also go for close to their original price if kept in pristine, scuff-free condition.

Shop abroad Treat yourself in eurozone countries, where the currency exchange rate is favorable to U.S. shoppers. You'll make a bigger profit when you resell in the States.

Know in-demand brands Pieces from these designers typically resell for 60 to 80 percent of their original price: Céline, Chloé, Louis Vuitton, and Saint Laurent.

TRAVEL

Planning a trip is faster and more social than ever, thanks to your smartphone. "Trending apps allow you to get alerts, share itineraries with friends, and browse things to do," says Griego.

WHERE SHOULD I LOOK FOR LAST-MINUTE RESERVATIONS?

FOR HOTEL ROOMS ROOMLIA APP

roomlia.com

Everyone needs a room of one's own, but finding it can be an exercise in endless scrolling. No longer. With Roomlia, enter your destination and travel dates and you'll get a visual guide to the top hotels available in the area.

Exclusive discounts and one-tap booking make the process—dare we say—a pleasure (free; available on Google Play and iTunes).

FOR A LIFT BANDWAGON APP

bandwagon.io

This taxi service helps travelers in the same vicinity coordinate a ride share. Enter your destination, wait for your match, and use the chat service to pick a meeting spot. You can settle the bill at the end of the ride through the payment feature, so you'll never have to exchange cash (free; available on Google Play and iTunes).

FOR NIGHTLIFE RECS GO WHERE THEY GO APP

gowheretheygo.com

Want to sip cocktails like Gwyneth Paltrow in L.A.? Or check out George Clooney's favorite London haunts? The app curates city guides based on popular celebrity hot spots ($1; available on iTunes).

SAUV BLANC ON DEMAND

Put down that $25 glass of room-service wine. Instead, cue up Drizly (free; available on Google Play and iTunes), your personal minibar delivery service. Have wine, beer, or spirits delivered to your room within an hour, minus the price markups. Now, that's something to say cheers to.

FOR RESTAURANT REZZIES RESERVE APP

reserve.com

Think of this download as your personal dining concierge. Chat with a reservation specialist about what you're looking for. Then he or she will help you skip the waiting list and secure a table at some of the toughest-to-get-into spots in town (free; available on Google Play and iTunes).

WHAT IS THE MOST ACCURATE WEATHER APP?

DARK SKY APP

darkskyapp.com

How's this for precise? Built-in radar technology uses your exact location to give you to-the-minute updates on when it will rain or snow. But it's on you to have an umbrella handy ($4; available on iTunes).

WHAT ARE THE BEST SITES AND APPS FOR BRIDES?

FOR FLOWERS REBLOOM

rebloomit.com

Your flowers are stunning, but you'll never use 'em again after the band plays the last song. Make someone else's day by donating them to Rebloom. The flower-sharing service will pick the centerpieces up from your venue and refresh the arrangements so that somebody can buy them at a low cost for an event the following day. A large portion of the proceeds go to charity.

1 $60/2 arrangements.

My carry-on for this cross-country flight is superlight. No laptop. No magazines. Not even my work papers. Heading to Los Angeles from New York to interview Drew Barrymore—it's my third time in 12 years—I packed only one thing to pass the time: an advance copy of the star's latest book, Wildflower. I am meeting Drew for lunch tomorrow. And while we have tons to catch up on—there's a moving new film called Miss You Already (co-starring Toni Collette), her two adorable daughters, plans for the fall—I want to be sure I have finished every page of this “non-memoir” collection of personal stories.

I dig in. The book is a deeply thoughtful and fun page turner—like a rich dessert that also happens to be good for you. In what feels like quintessential Drew Barrymore, she alights on moments from her biography, some very familiar (touring with Steven Spielberg to promote E.T., flashing David Letterman during an appearance on his show) and others quite private (visiting her estranged and ailing father in the hospital, meeting her eventual in-laws for the first time). She provides readers with insight into her life but also offers universal truths in new and surprising ways. I'm laughing, nodding, tearing up, dog-earing.

When I arrive at my hotel, I email Drew to tell her how much I enjoyed the book and to confirm plans for the following day. She responds moments later, telling me that she's bowled over by my response, especially since, it turns out, I am the first person, besides her editor, to have read the book. She is still “freaking,” as she puts it. It’s clear now that our lunch is going to be the most intimate and exhilarating book-club meeting ever.

Around 1 P.M. the next day, I head over to Spago’s bistro in the heart of Beverly Hills. Drew is already situated in an enormous banquette toward the back of the restaurant. Big smiles, big hugs. Drew, fresh-faced in barely there makeup, is wearing a white peasant Topshop blouse and coordinating skirt, her J. Crew flats kicked off beneath the table. Before I click on the recorder, Wolfgang Puck—the Wolfgang Puck, legendary chef, restaurateur, and of course, owner of Spago’s—swings by our table to chat. Drew, ever gracious, pops up immediately and thanks him for having us. She reminds him that one of her best birthday parties ever was her 10th, at the original Spago’s Sunset Strip location. They laugh at how things have changed—they now share the same pediatrician! I laugh knowingly, almost as if I too send my imaginary kids to the same doctor. Their talk turns to late-summer plans. They land on Provence as another point of intersection. Then Puck leaves us to our interview. Throughout, Drew remains attentive and warm toward every food server and guest who approaches. While she may have termed herself a wildflower, she is most like honeysuckle: distinctly inviting and sweet.

ARIEL FOXMAN: You confess in the foreword of your latest book that you wrote it assuming no one would ever read it. But then you go on to say, “And yet, I wrote for you, the person reading this right now!” Clearly you have a robust audience interested in what you have to say. Without too much navel-gazing, have you made sense of why it is that people respond so positively to you?

DREW BARRYMORE: Half of me is like, I’ll never be able to answer that. If you even think that’s true, the only thing I can say is thank you and yay! But to the extent it might be true, perhaps it is because people sense how much I uphold them. I’m on everybody’s team, but not in an idealistic, hippie-like way. That’s not how the world works. I really love and care and want people to feel appreciated. There definitely is a team somewhere to be had, and not only do I want to be on it, but I want to be the person who’s slapping everyone’s back, who is bringing the cooler of beers and making it the best night ever. I basically want to be Norm from Cheers.

Except I don’t think Norm ever wrote a book. You, on the other hand, are an author! Twice over. I don’t want to gloss over your first book, 1990’s Little Girl Lost. You wrote that when you were 14 years old. I remember when it came out, I was growing up in New Jersey. I’d wait every Saturday for People magazine to arrive in the mailbox. I can still visualize that major cover story “Drew Barrymore Exclusive: Little Girl Lost.” What’s your take on that book today? Do you wish it never happened? No. No, not at all. Every moment had to have happened to have today. That book is fun and cool. There’s something campy about it, but it’s also very raw. I’ll see it on some groovy chick’s Instagram, and I’ll laugh. She thinks it’s a riot grrrl book, but I’m such a mom now it seems so distant to me. When I was writing Wildflower, I very consciously decided not to look at it. I could have. It is in my room, in the “Barrymore library”—the stack of all the dusty old hard-cover books my family has written, from my aunt Diana’s Too Much, Too Soon to everything that Ethel, Lionel, and John wrote. Little Girl Lost belongs in that crazy category, and I’m glad it’s there, but I didn’t want to be influenced this time around.

This is a very different book anyway. Little Girl Lost was a sort of terrifying account of drugs, sex, and rock and roll. Especially because you were so young at the time. In Wildflower, there’s hardly any mention of sex. There’s not even one funny bumbling-sex anecdote, which could have easily had its place, or barely any mention of your previous relationships. I consciously chose not to include those. I want this book to be a love letter to my daughters, Frankie and Olive. They don’t need to know about my sex life. My own mother, Jaid, wrote a book on sex [Secrets of World Class Lovers: Erotic Tips & Sensual Stories for a Lifetime of Sexual Fulfillment], and it was the most mortifying feeling in the world. So I know how a child feels when their parents put themselves out there too much, and I will never do that to my daughters. There are some things about your parents you just don’t need to know.

Is that the same reason you don’t go into your past relationships? There are things your husband, Will [Kopelman], doesn’t need to be reminded of about his wife? Yes. It’s a matter of respect. I felt it was inappropriate to discuss relationships and encounters I have had with another person. Those memories are all in their boxes, up in the top shelf of the closet. They exist. They are beautiful, and they belong in a secret land. You said Will hasn’t read the book yet. Did you show him chapters while you were working? He actually read the chapter “In-Law Jackpot,” since it is about his parents, Arie Kopelman [the former CEO of Chanel] and Coco, his wife. I wanted Will’s approval not as a writer but as a fact-checker.

Did writing about Will cause you to revisit those magical love-at-first-sight moments when you met? I mean, it was never really love at first sight. Will struck a lot of my pragmatic sides: He was someone who was always reachable on the phone, someone who was a classy human being, someone who had this incredible blueprint of a family that I don’t have. At the same time, what I love about him is that he embodies the power of choice. He chooses to be a good person every day.

You write in the chapter “Domestic Bliss” about a certain pancake-making fiasco that actually brought you closer to Will. “I hate yes-men,” you write, and that Will is not. Are you both very frank with each other in terms of criticism? [Laughing] No, I am a gentle suggester. He is a hard hitter. And I still haven’t grown used to it. We’ve made many compromises and concessions, but when it comes to how we deliver likes and dislikes, we're polar opposites. It's still really hard.

Let's talk about parenting. You describe how the ways in which you were—and were not—parented affect how you are raising your children now. You've built a network of fellow parents, from Steven Spielberg to Nan [Nancy] Juvonen, with whom you run your production company, Flower Films. Could you talk a bit about how you balance what kind of parent you want to be, keeping in mind all the experiences you've had growing up, with allowing your children the freedom to develop as human beings on their own? Whoa, that was a long sentence. No, it was great! When I was first parenting, I was afraid to let my daughters feel conflict. If Frankie or Olive was upset, I would try to fix everything for them. Then I realized the only way they are going to learn coping mechanisms is to work through those feelings themselves. But it is a constant fight. I do want a safety net to always be there for them, but since I had such a lack of support growing up, my challenge is to not overcompensate. As they're getting older, I'm growing more confident in discerning the difference between making sure they are safe and doing everything for them.

Did having a second child throw you off in terms of things you thought you knew for sure as a mother? I definitely have learned to approach each child differently. I have a great intensity with Olive.

It is our karmic destiny to figure it out together. With Frankie, her younger sister, our dynamic is much more easygoing, but that too will change. Over time, Frankie will benefit from the confidence and knowledge I built with Olive, but it's a constant dance.

How important will it be for the girls—or if you have other children, for them—to do chores, and why? My kids will be safe and secure, but they will not be coddled. They will not be free from responsibility. The best things that happened to me came from clocking in at work at an early age and having to deal with it when things got really tough. It made me responsible and accountable. I wouldn't wish my experience on my own kids, but it's important that they have pride in earning their own money and the respect to live up to their commitments. At home, we sing the clean-up song every morning, and the girls must be accountable. Olive has a fish, and she cleans her bowl every single week.

Aww, what's her fish named? Elizabeth, and she named her. When we feed her, we say, "Bon appétit, Elizabeth." She's like this badass goldfish.

Olive is 3 years old. Frankie is 1. By the time you were their age, you'd already begun your acting career, starring in a commercial for Puppy Chow. Miss You Already marks your 49th feature film. It's also one of your most dramatic.

Toni Collette plays Milly, your best friend, who is dying from cancer; you play Jess, a young woman who, after many tries, finds out she's finally pregnant. It's a tremendously tender film that captures the vulnerabilities and joys that friendship and family bring. How has being a mother changed how you approach your performances? There have been a lot of phases. When I was 11 months old, I didn't really have a choice. But by the time I was auditioning for E.T., I loved it. I don't know if it was about the acting or just getting to live a different life from the one I had. I was hungry for love, and I was such a romantic, even then. Happy endings were always important to me. So I threw everything I had into the role. Later, as an adult, after projects like Grey Gardens and

Whip It, which took a lot out of me, I realized I don't have to have that psychopathic insular attitude any longer. There is a distance and a maturity and a confidence that I think the audience can't help but notice. It's like I used to care so much—as if the films I was making were the only thing that existed in my universe. Now they are just one thing in my life.

Do you believe in your talent? Not really. I can't lie for sh—. I don't think I can act for sh—. But I really love storytelling. That's what I believe in. So to the extent that my performances are part of telling a believable story, I'm really proud.

Yesterday I was talking to a woman in my office who said one of the reasons she's always been a big fan of yours is that you're not obsessed with body image and the idea that a woman must eternally look 25 in a swimsuit. No, I'm not. Genetically, I would drive myself nuts if I were. I am who I am, and I just don't have a bikini body. I don't even have a one-piece body anymore, but I am loving the long rash-guard, board-shorts look. Thankfully, it's in vogue.

Is body image something you think about more now that you have two girls? Absolutely. I've beaten myself up for not being a certain thing. If someone says, "Let's go the beach today," my first thought is, F—, what am I going to wear? I remember when Amy Schumer was on Ellen, she called her midsection a "lava lamp." I thought, That was perfect! That's what I've been trying to say. But then I saw her in Trainwreck, and she looked so good in a tiny bra and short skirt. I was like, "No, you don't have a lava lamp." Every girl is just a bit neurotic. We're not going to be able to cure that completely. But it's simply crazytown to want to be something you're not. The messages we send to ourselves and to other women, what we relay to our children, those images have to be based on reality. There's just too much fantasy as it is now, too much comparison. It's heartbreaking to do that to yourself, and it is very toxic to do that to your children. You can't control how you were built, but you can control how you relate to it. ■

"I'm not going to pretend to my daughters that I'm pure as the driven snow... The best I can do is open up my heart to them. That's soul-baring enough."

The voice comes crackling through the line. Naomi Campbell, one of the world's most iconic supermodels, says hello. "I have a rare week off," explains the 45-year-old with a slight English lilt, "so I'm in Spain." Downtime is indeed in short supply for Ms. Campbell, who has of late added actress to an already lengthy résumé. She continues her role as Camilla Marks, the cougar paramour, in Season 2 of Lee Daniels's Fox smash Empire, and she débuts alongside Kathy Bates and Lady Gaga as Claudia Bankson, a fashion editor, in the fifth season of FX's American Horror Story. "I still have my day job as a model," she says. "But things are changing. I'll be at the airport, and someone will shout out, 'Hey, Camilla!' and I'll say, 'Wait, I'm Naomi!'"

PERSONAL STYLE: "Much more relaxed now. I don't care too much about trends. I dress how I feel. Thankfully, I've been blessed to work with designers like Azzedine Alaïa, Christopher Bailey [now at Burberry], and Versace, who know what I like and have made me wonderful dresses."

VACATION OUTFIT: "A long black hippie dress, a hippie belt, sandals, and, of course, a bikini."

HOW SHE GOT THE AMERICAN HORROR STORY GIG:

"I met [series creator] Ryan Murphy at a dinner at [agent] Bryan Lourd's house. He knew every picture I've done."

FIRST PICTURE SHE DID: At age 7, she appeared in Bob Marley's 1978 music video "Is This Love?"

SCENES: "They're equally challenging. What would be intimate to you in real life is different from what is in front of people. I'm shy, believe it or not. Horror scenes are hard too, because you have to draw upon personal experiences to channel that fear."

ON ACTING VERSUS MODELING: "I wasn't trying for a career change, but everyone's been so supportive in the acting world. To be honest, what I really want to do is produce." —MARY H.K. CHOI

Elle Fanning lets out an exuberant squeal as she bounds across L.A.'s Milk Studios toward Diane Lane, her co-star in Trumbo. Out November 6, the movie tells the true story of blacklisted screenwriter Dalton Trumbo (Breaking Bad's Bryan Cranston) and the three women in his life. Lane and Fanning play two of them: Cleo, his wife, and Nikola, his daughter, respectively. As evinced by the real-life hug, Lane and Fanning's onscreen warmth is genuine. "We got very close," Fanning says. Lane, who grew up in the orbit of an intense father, drama teacher Burt Lane, marveled at the Fanning family magic. "Her mother was with us in New Orleans," she says, "and you could get a sense of health, which is not the norm for acting families. You can tell she comes from good stock."

In the film, Cleo and Nikola rally around Dalton to protect him against the red-baiting launched by columnist Hedda Hopper, portrayed with dangerous magnetism by Helen Mirren. The three women share little screen time—"My character was in a different world," explains Mirren—and true to form, Mirren calls in from southern Italy today. Of her protagonist she says, "I thought of Hedda as a villain, but she also wore great hats!"

In fact, being enamored with the movie's vintage fashion, which ranges from the 1950s to the 1970s, was something the actresses had in common. At the film's conclusion, Fanning, who was 16 while shooting, wears a stunning vintage Halston gown to play an adult version of Nikola. "I walked out of wardrobe, and the crew members said, 'Oh, hello! Nice to meet you!' I was like, 'Guys, it's me, Elle!'" Despite missing Mirren on set by one day, Fanning charmed her co-star by leaving a head scarf in her trailer with a note saying, "Welcome to the movie!" Says Mirren, "That's when I fell in love with her."

Fittingly for a film about how we age and what age we age in, each of the actresses values the work of the other. "Women are always walking in one another's footprints, and we try to take them a little further than the previous generation has been allowed to go," says Lane. —SARAH MESLE

THE INSTYLE AWARDS

HOLLYWOOD'S 50 BEST Dressed

In our increasingly image-driven era, ruling the red carpet is not as simple as it used to be. The stakes have never been higher for stars to make an indelible impression on television, on social media, and in the pages of a magazine. Here, we celebrate 50 women (and a few of their male accessories) who prove that fashion, when used wisely, can be a compelling weapon.

HAUTE COUTURE

WHY WE LOVE HER

Outrageously brazen. Impeccably stylish. Two extremes harmonized in a magnificently dazzling fashion performance.

THE LOOK WE'LL NEVER FORGET

Man, does she make an entrance. "She wears couture like a T-shirt," says Giambattista Valli of her pink Grammys gown, which might have been visible from space.

HER POWER OVER FASHION

Rihanna's well-received campaign for Dior broke barriers, even as her personal style empire continues to grow. In addition to developing her own line, she's also Puma's women's creative director.

THE PRIZEFIGHTER

WHY WE LOVE HER

Her awards season sweep went beyond collecting trophies, as she triumphed in custom gown after custom gown.

THE LOOK WE'LL NEVER FORGET

Designed just for Moore by Karl Lagerfeld, her Chanel Haute Couture Oscars gown was made of 80,000 handsewn sequins.

HER POWER OVER FASHION

She's been a muse to Tom Ford, a campaign face for Bulgari and L'Oréal Paris, and, in her most surprising appearance, a guest star gambling in Chanel's Haute Couture casino show.

DESIGNER OF THE YEAR

NICOLAS GHESQUIÈRE

WHY WE LOVE HIM

His agenda-setting collections as artistic director for Louis Vuitton (after 15 years at Balenciaga) are the thrilling final word on every season. Ghesquière's philosophy: "Without innovation, a house has a weakness."

WHO WEARS HIS DESIGNS

WHY WE LOVE HER

Although she never suffers what-are-you-wearing fools gladly, she does take her fashion seriously. Hollywood has never had a better role model.

THE LOOK WE'LL NEVER FORGET

At the Oscars, the combination of a humble black dress (OK, it was couture) with Tiffany & Co. turquoise jewelry was downright dynamite.

HER POWER OVER FASHION

She respects the designer's craft, even flying to Milan to toast Giorgio Armani's 40th anniversary. "When you develop genuine relationships," she says, "it's important to honor them."

THE SHINING EXAMPLE

WHY WE LOVE HER

She's a thoughtful voice for a new generation. Her galvanizing campaign for feminism preceded a major moment of reckoning for Hollywood, bringing the movement for gender equality to the red carpet and beyond.

HER POWER OVER FASHION

Though Watson is no stranger to vivid color, her minimalist style tends to favor a strong and assertive palette of black and white.

red-carpet CHAMPIONS

TOM FORD

He typically dresses only one lucky Oscars guest (Reese Witherspoon this year), but bringing his fall runway show to Los Angeles in February reminded the world of his far-reaching celebrity magnetism.

RAF SIMONS

The creative director of Christian Dior has transformed eveningwear standards with his fearlessly voluminous takes on ballgowns worn by Dior ambassadors Marion Cotillard and Jennifer Lawrence.

GIAMBATTISTA VALLI

With his multiple collections propelling his star power (see Talk to Me, p. 83), Valli had a big year, dressing Lupita Nyong'o at the Golden Globes and Rihanna at the Grammys.

heroes of the GLAM SQUAD

HARRY JOSH

Before Gisele Bündchen and Gwyneth Paltrow entrusted him with their tresses, Josh was a casting director for Marc Jacobs. Now he's a John Frieda international consultant and one of the most sought-after stylists for textured waves and high-gloss styles. His line of pro tools has become an industry fave.

ORIBE

He's worked with Jennifer Lopez since the start, and just about everyone else since. He crafts some of the most attention-grabbing, glamorous hairstyles on the red carpet (remember J. Lo's hyper-bouffant at the 2002 Oscars?), and each one is designed with a single objective: to make a woman feel fantastic.

MARY PHILLIPS

Phillips is the creative force behind many mesmerizing makeup moments from Khloé Kardashian, Jennifer Lopez, and Gwen Stefani, to name just a few. She specializes in glowing, dewy skin that's almost luminous.

SIR JOHN

The New York makeup artist became such a sensation for the high-impact looks of Beyoncé (and models Karlie Kloss and Joan Smalls) that L'Oréal Paris named him a celebrity makeup artist this year. And yes, that's his real name.

GUCCI WESTMAN

Drew Barrymore and Cameron Diaz rely on her artistry, while the fashion industry chases after her cool factor for runway looks. (She's married to Rag & Bone designer David Neville.) And when she was Revlon's global artistic director, she created its Color Stories range.

WHY WE LOVE HIM

The most humble man in beauty is also one of the busiest. Besides opening a fabulous new Manhattan salon this year (the three-level Serge Normant at John Frieda in Chelsea), the French hairstylist and author of two beauty books is in constant demand among a roster of amazing stars.

HIS MAIN MANES

JOSEPH CASSELL

With a client who is seen in perfectly matched ensembles even when she's running to the gym (Taylor Swift, that is), Cassell covers a lot of territory, introducing hidden talents like London's Ashish for the MTV Video Music Awards.

PETRA FLANNERY

Ever wonder how Amy Adams, Michelle Monaghan, Zoë Saldana, and Emma Stone appear in a series of wow-inducing looks that also tell a story as a whole? That's Flannery, who keeps her eye on the big picture.

LESLIE FREMAR

From coordinating Julianne Moore's custom gowns for awards season to positioning a rising talent like Nicola Peltz to wear gowns from the world's top designers, Fremar can help establish a star by opening all the right doors.

ELIZABETH STEWART

She's the smartest stylist in the business, having learned her fashion history firsthand as an editor at Women's Wear Daily and The New York Times. It's no surprise that Cate Blanchett, Jessica Chastain, and Julia Roberts, all women with precisely defined styles, look to Stewart for direction.

KARLA WELCH & KEMAL HARRIS

The ultracool styling team came to prominence when they crafted a strategic wardrobe for Hailee Steinfeld after her True Grit breakout. Now they manage the wardrobes of major clients like Felicity Jones and Robin Wright (Harris was the costume designer for Wright on the third season of House of Cards).

5 Recipes to Be Thankful For

Leave it to one of our all-time favorite chefs, TRAVIS LETT of Venice Beach, Calif., hot spot Gjelina, to bring a fresh approach to a Thanksgiving meal. Each of these crowd-pleasing side dishes brims with bright flavors, from citrus to pomegranate, and all but the decadent dessert are made without cream or butter

Maintaining Zen: A Turkey-Day Time Line

Take the stress out of cooking for your crowd by planning ahead. Here's a cheat sheet that'll keep you chanting ommm and not OMG.

2-3 DAYS BEFORE

- Buy the ingredients for all the recipes listed in this story. When it comes to the produce, the chicory and fresh dill are the most fragile, so select the freshest ones you can find. Keep them dry and refrigerated and they'll be sure to last.
- Bake the chocolate tart, let it cool, then wrap and refrigerate it (the dough can be made and frozen well in advance too).

1 DAY BEFORE

- Prep all the veggies: Wash, carefully dry, trim, and halve the Brussels sprouts, chicory, and endive. Store in plastic zipper bags and chill.
- Make the purple potato recipe (wait to add the fresh herbs until just before serving) and chill.
- Make the dressing for the chicory (squeeze an extra  $\frac{1}{3}$  cup lemon juice for the Brussels sprouts the next day). Cover and chill it all.

THE BIG DAY

THAT MORNING:

- Roast the acorn squash (Steps 1 and 2 in recipe). Cover and set aside.
- Complete the first two steps of the Brussels sprouts recipe. Cover and set aside.

2 HOURS BEFORE THE MEAL:

- Make the pesto for the acorn squash.

30 MINUTES BEFORE THE MEAL:

- Complete Step 3 of the Brussels sprouts recipe.
- Make the chicory dish.
- Warm the acorn squash; dress with pesto.
- Warm the potatoes and fold in the fresh herbs.

FRESH TOUCHES

Unleash your prized heirloom china and play the artist. All it takes is the addition of a few unexpected details.

- HIGH-LOW GLASSWARE Create a cool contrast by placing old-school goblets next to modern tumblers. Both styles shown here have gold details that connect them visually.

- DELICATE FLORALS Single branches like these seeded eucalyptus look unstudied and sculptural.

- TEXTILES WITH TEXTURE Juxtapose refined and rustic elements by selecting a tablecloth with a nubby weave—all the more for your polished glasses and plates to play against.

BRUSSELS SPROUTS

with Bacon, Balsamic & Lemon

Brussels sprouts are one of Lett's most in-demand dishes at Gjelina—he makes a whopping 400 servings a week. "Look for small, tight, and very fresh ones.

They're sweeter and easier to cook than larger versions that have been sitting around for too long," he says.

SERVES 6

TOTAL TIME 30 minutes

- 6 slices thick-cut bacon, cut into  $\frac{1}{4}$ -inch pieces
- 2 tbsp extra-virgin olive oil, divided
- 2 lbs. small Brussels sprouts, halved
- Salt and pepper
- $\frac{1}{3}$  cup fresh lemon juice
- 3 garlic cloves
- 1 tbsp balsamic vinegar
- $\frac{1}{2}$  tsp thyme leaves

1 In a large cast-iron skillet, cook bacon over moderate heat, stirring occasionally, until browned but not crisp, about 5 minutes. Using a slotted spoon, transfer bacon to paper towels to drain. 2 Pour off fat from skillet; heat 1 tbsp of the olive oil in it. Add half the Brussels sprouts, cut side down; season with salt and pepper. Cook over moderately high heat until very browned on the bottom, 3 to 5 minutes. Using a slotted spoon, transfer to a plate. Repeat with remaining olive oil and Brussels sprouts. 3 Return all the Brussels sprouts to the skillet. Add  $\frac{1}{2}$  cup water, cover, and cook over moderate heat, stirring occasionally, until tender, 5 to 7 minutes. 4 Stir in bacon, lemon juice, and garlic; cook for 2 minutes, stirring occasionally. Stir in vinegar; season with salt and pepper. 5 Transfer to a serving bowl, garnish with thyme, and serve.

CHOCOLATE TART with Pine-Nut Crust

Fork-Smashed PURPLE POTATOES

Surprise your guests with this vibrant bowl of spuds and prepare for yelps of joy. Lett favors Peruvian purple potatoes, but small waxy potatoes, preferably from the green market, will work well too. "These are a lighter alternative to butter-laced mashed potatoes," says Lett. "They absorb quite a bit of olive oil, so be generous with it, along with the sea salt—add it in stages, tasting as you go."

SERVES 6
ACTIVE TIME 20 minutes
TOTAL TIME 55 minutes

2 lbs. baby purple potatoes
Salt

$\frac{1}{2}$  cup extra-virgin olive oil
3 tbsp peeled fresh horseradish, finely grated
2 tbsp finely chopped parsley
1 tbsp chopped dill
1 tsp chopped thyme
 $\frac{1}{2}$  tsp finely grated lemon zest
Pepper

1 In a large saucepan, cover the potatoes with water and bring to a boil. Add a generous pinch of salt and simmer over moderate heat until tender, about 25 minutes. Drain well and let cool slightly. 2 Using a paring knife, peel off and discard three fourths of the skin from each potato. Transfer the potatoes to a large bowl. 3 Using a fork, coarsely smash the potatoes. Stir in the olive oil, horseradish, parsley, dill, thyme, and lemon zest until the mixture just starts to come together. Season with salt and pepper, and serve warm.

ROASTED CHICORY with Lemon-Anchovy Dressing

Teaching moment: Radicchio, endive, and escarole are just a few of the leafy greens from the chicory family. "They have incredible depth of flavor when handled correctly," says Lett. "People tend to avoid them because of the bitterness and firm textures, but we love them at Gjelina. Substitute in young, crispy romaine or kale if chicory is hard to find."

SERVES 6
TOTAL TIME 30 minutes

12 oz. chicory or frisée, torn into small bunches
3 heads Belgian endive,

halved lengthwise
 $\frac{1}{4}$  cup plus 3 tbsp extra-virgin olive oil, divided
Salt and pepper
 $\frac{1}{4}$  cup plus 2 tbsp fresh lemon juice
1½ tbsp minced anchovy fillet
1 tbsp honey
1 large garlic clove, minced
Shredded Parmesan, for topping

1 Preheat oven to 450°F. 2 On a large rimmed baking sheet, toss chicory and endive with 1 tbsp of the olive oil and 2 tbsp of water; season with salt and pepper. Roast for about 6 minutes, until barely wilted. Transfer to a platter. 3 Meanwhile, in a small bowl, whisk lemon juice with the anchovy, honey, garlic, and remaining olive oil. Season with salt and pepper. 4 Spoon some dressing over the greens and top with shredded Parmesan. Serve warm, passing around additional dressing and cheese at the table.

ACORN SQUASH with Mint & Pomegranate Pesto

Selecting very fresh acorn squash, says Lett, makes this dish shine (once it turns orange, it's past its prime). And the pesto spooned on top takes it to another level: "Bright, sweet, and herbaceous, it feels like it has its roots in the Middle Eastern rim of the Mediterranean Sea, where pomegranates grow plentifully," he says. "Look for pomegranate molasses at a Middle Eastern specialties store, or substitute it with aged balsamic vinegar."

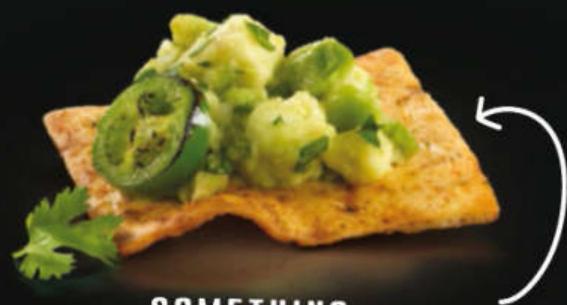

SERVES 6
ACTIVE TIME 30 minutes
TOTAL TIME 1 hour, 30 minutes

2 1½-lb. acorn squashes, quartered through the stem
 $\frac{1}{2}$  cup extra-virgin olive oil, plus more for brushing
Salt and pepper
2 tbsp pepitas
1 tsp coriander seeds
1 tsp cumin seeds
1 garlic clove, crushed
 $\frac{1}{2}$  cup plus 2 tbsp finely chopped mint
 $\frac{1}{4}$  cup finely chopped parsley
 $\frac{1}{4}$  cup pomegranate seeds
1 tbsp pomegranate molasses ($13/14 oz.; amazon.com)
1 tbsp fresh lime juice

1 Preheat oven to 350°F. 2 In a large baking dish, brush the squash with olive oil and season it with salt and pepper. Add  $\frac{1}{4}$  cup of water to the baking dish and cover tightly with foil. Bake for about 50 minutes, until barely tender. Uncover and bake for 20 to 25 minutes longer, until

Turkey Prep School

Fresh-from-the-farm ingredients and an easy approach are hallmarks of Lett's uncomplicated cooking style. Below, his three secrets to making a stellar bird.

BUTTERFLY THE BIRD

It substantially decreases the cooking time and yields a more juicy, evenly cooked result. Use a knife or poultry shears (or ask the butcher) to cut out the spine, saving it for later to make a pan gravy.

GO FOR A BRINE

This is the key to a super-moist turkey. Make and chill the brine ahead of time (Lett mixes in citrus and fresh herbs), and then let the bird sit in it overnight. Remove and air-dry the turkey uncovered in the fridge a few hours prior to roasting.

RUB IT WITH HERBS

Lett's preferred blend? Chopped fresh sage, rosemary, and thyme, plus coarse salt and pepper, ground with a mortar and pestle. Use the blend generously, covering the skin of the turkey.

→ For Lett's butterflied-turkey recipe, go to instyle.com/lett tender and browned in spots. Transfer to a platter. 3 Meanwhile, in a small skillet, toast the pepitas over moderate heat, stirring until lightly browned, about 3 minutes. Transfer to a mortar or mini food processor. 4 In the skillet, toast the coriander and cumin seeds over moderate heat, stirring until fragrant, 1 to 2 minutes. Transfer to the mortar. 5 Add the garlic and a pinch of salt to the mortar, and, using a pestle, grind into a coarse paste. Scrape into a medium bowl and stir in  $\frac{1}{2}$  cup olive oil, mint, parsley, pomegranate seeds, molasses, and lime juice. Season with salt and pepper. 6 Spoon some of the pesto over the squash and serve, passing around additional pesto at the table.

CHOCOLATE TART with Pine-Nut Crust

End your feast with a satisfying dessert that shares the same ingredients-forward philosophy as the rest of the meal. "I try to keep our chocolate desserts about one thing: chocolate!" explains Lett, who features this recipe in his new book, Gjelina (Chronicle Books, $35; bn.com). For that reason, this dense tart pairs perfectly with a bit of unsweetened crème fraîche on the side and a sprinkling of pomegranate seeds.

SERVES 8–10

TOTAL TIME 1 hour, 5 minutes (plus chilling)

CRUST

1 cup all-purpose flour
1 cup blanched almond flour
 $\frac{1}{2}$  cup unsweetened Dutch-process cocoa powder
 $\frac{1}{2}$  cup pine nuts, finely ground
 $\frac{1}{2}$  tsp fine sea salt
10 tbsp unsalted butter, softened
 $\frac{3}{4}$  cup granulated sugar

FILLING

1 cup unsalted butter
 $\frac{1}{2}$  oz. 72% dark chocolate, chopped
1 cup packed light brown sugar
 $\frac{1}{2}$  tbsp unsweetened Dutch-process cocoa powder
 $\frac{1}{2}$  tsp kosher salt
4 large eggs
Whipped cream, pomegranate molasses, and pomegranate seeds for serving (optional)

Make the crust: 1 In a medium bowl, whisk flour with almond flour, cocoa powder, ground pine nuts, and sea salt. 2 In the bowl of a standing mixer fitted with the paddle (or using a handheld mixer), cream the butter with the sugar at medium speed until fluffy, about 2 minutes. With the mixer at low speed, beat in dry ingredients until a dough forms. 3 Roll out the dough between two sheets of parchment paper to an  $\frac{1}{8}$ -inch-thick round, about 12 inches in diameter. Refrigerate for at least 2 hours or overnight. 4 Preheat oven to 350°F. 5 Butter a fluted, 10-inch, removable-bottom tart pan, and press the dough into the bottom and up the side, trimming any overhang. 6 Bake for about 25 minutes, until firm to the touch. Transfer the crust to a rack and let cool completely, about 1 hour. Lower the oven temperature to 325°F.

Make the filling: 1 In a large heatproof bowl set over a saucepan of simmering water, melt the butter and chocolate, stirring occasionally, until smooth. Add the brown sugar, cocoa powder, and salt, and heat, whisking occasionally until the sugar is dissolved, about 3 minutes. Whisk in the eggs one at a time until the filling is shiny and smooth. 2 Pour the filling into the tart shell and bake for about 30 minutes, until firm and the center is set. Transfer to a rack and let cool completely, then unmold and transfer to a plate. Serve with a dollop of whipped cream, a drizzle of molasses, and a sprinkling of pomegranate seeds.

IAm That Girl . . .

Shonda Rhimes

InStyle has partnered with the nonprofit organization I Am That Girl to chat frankly with celebrities about issues affecting girls' self-esteem. This month Shonda Rhimes, the creator and writer of hit shows like Grey's Anatomy and Scandal, opens up about being a geeky kid, a ballsy working mom, and an unapologetically "shameless" architect of her own success.

Our sister publication Entertainment Weekly recently had you on its cover with the headline "It's Shonda Rhimes' World. We Just Watch It." What do you hope girls learn from your example?

That anything is possible. I meet a lot of young women today who defeat themselves by thinking they can't do something before they've even tried! It literally has never occurred to me that I couldn't achieve whatever I wanted to. I'm still coming to terms with the fact that I'm not going to be an Olympic figure skater. [Laughs.]

What were you like as a kid? Quiet. I played the oboe. I was a nerd and very happy to be one. I was the youngest of six. My parents were educators. I was always reading. I felt that inside of a book, I could go anywhere.

The female characters you've created are well known for their strength and confidence. Despite everything you've accomplished, do you ever still get nervous or uncomfortable? Billions of times. I hate public speaking. I'm a writer. People don't become writers so other people can look at them. But I don't let my shyness stop me. Even if it means I have a complete meltdown before going on stage, I've learned to power through it. It's the doing-it-anyway part that's important.

That is one of the key messages of your new book on sale this month, The Year of Yes (Simon & Schuster).

Can you tell us how you decided to write it? The book came about because I was sitting around with my sister, and she said to me, "You never say yes to anything. All you ever do is work and come home." I realized she was right; I had become even more introverted, and I was working more than ever. So I challenged myself to say yes to every single thing that frightened me, every offer that came my way, for a year. I did Jimmy Kimmel Live, I gave a commencement speech at Dartmouth, I guest-starred on The Mindy Project...

You became fearless. As a mom of three girls, is that something you feel determined about passing along?

Absolutely. I want them to have integrity, but I also want them to be strong and confident, the kind of women who will speak up for themselves. Everyone's always like, "Well, what about kindness?" I say, "Yes, I want them to be kind. But I also want them to be competitive, kickass, badass women!"

Having it all: Do you think it's possible? That's a complex question because each person's definition should be different. First, that the idea of having it all means only one thing—having a husband, a baby, and a career—is appalling.

"Blow up the concept of having it all. Who cares?"

Second, nobody asks men that question. Whenever reporters ask me, "How do you do it? How do you manage?" I always say, "Did you ask this of [TV writer and producer] Chuck Lorre?"

What are you most proud of? Other than my kids, the thing I'm most proud of is this little empire that I said I was going to build. And I did it a little bit shamelessly. Women never say, "I did this thing and it's awesome." We are always very self-deprecating. We almost never "own" our victories.

If you could tell every girl in the world one thing, what would it be? The only limit to your success is your own imagination. —JENNIFER MERRITT
